10,000 MILES O'ER LAND AND SEA

Some Experiences and Observations Gathered by the Editor of the Graphic in a Trip Across the Continent and to Far Away Hawaii

We found the Tennessee one of the finest ships in the navy. It carried the "meat ball" which signified the championship of the navy in gunnery, engineering and general efficiency. Its officers were most courteous to us and did all in their power to make things pleasant for us.

The ship carried 1203 enlisted men, 80 officers and 75 marines, a total of 1358 persons. Most of the enlisted men were young, almost boys in fact and one of the officers told us that their work was almost like that of school teachers. The men sleep in hammocks, which are slung at 9 P. M. with lights out at 9.15. They are up at five in the morning and scrub the decks and other work until breakfast at 7.30.

Every morning at nine o'clock, the men line up by divisions and go through a course of calisthenics to the music of the band. This is preceded by an official report from the officers in charge of each division, made to the Executive officer of the ship.

The following menu will give an idea how they were fed this particular day, costing Uncle Sam 44.16 cents for the three meals:

Breakfast
Fried corn beef hash—Tomato catsup, oatmeal mush, prunes, bread, butter, coffee

Dinner
Rice, tomato soup, boiled ham, crackers, boiled spinach, boiled spuds, turnips, pickles, coconut cream pie, bread, coffee

Supper
Hamburger loaf—Spanish gravy—creamed potatoes, pickled beets and onions, apple sauce, bread, tea

They are paid from $21 a month up with a pay day twice a month. Some idea of the cost of the Navy can be gathered from the fact that the paymaster of the fleet drew four million dollars from San Francisco banks to meet his payroll during the trip across the Pacific to Honolulu. The ship's paymasters when carrying money in a boat have a bag with a rope and a wooden buoy attached, so in case of accident, the bag can be located by means of the buoy.

Every Friday is field day aboard the ship, and that morning is spent in giving the deck a scrubbing with sand-soap and water, and in polishing up every bit of brass work. Saturday is inspection day and the Captain goes all over the ship examining the clothing of the men who are lined up in divisions, and in looking over the kitchen, mess implements, etc. Captain Upham was very thorough, even turning down the collars of some of the men to take a look at the undershirt.

The captain has the rear of the ship on the starboard (or right) side for his exclusive use, the senior officers have the rear port side, the warrant officers have the forward part of the quarter deck for their use. When an admiral is aboard he takes over the captain's quarters and the captain takes the forward part of the quarter deck. It should be understood that the quarter deck is in the rear end of the ship.

The Tennessee is 624 feet long, with 97 feet beam and draws a little over 30 feet of water, with a displacement of 32,600 tons. She has a speed of 21 knots (about 24 miles) an hour. She has 12 guns, with 14-inch bore, placed in series of threes, two turrets in the rear and two in the front part of the ship. These guns use a shell weighing 1400 pounds and have a range of about 15 miles. When one considers that the horizon is about 12 miles from a person standing on deck, the range of these implements of war is significant. In addition there are twelve 5-inch rapid fire guns, eight 3-inch anti-aircraft guns, one 3-inch field piece and two 21-inch torpedo tubes.

The ship is divided into sections, so that if one section is put out of service for any cause, it is possible to isolate that part of the ship. In addition the ship has five distinct hulls, and could withstand considerable damage below the water line.

One of the interesting things on the ship is the catapult for launching the seaplane. This catapult is 41 feet in length, and is operated by compressed air (the more modern ships use powder). The sea plane is placed at the end of the machine and by means of the compressed air is shot over the side of the ship, reaching a speed of 50 miles an hour as it leaves the catapult.

A ship the size of the "Tennessee" is practically a town in itself, and has all the facilities found ashore in a community of equal population.

Practically everything is electrically operated, from the two huge twenty-ton cranes for hoisting and lowering seven motor boats and eight pulling boats, down to the small potato peeler found in the galley. The three 10-ton anchors are handled by electric motors, and are similar to the ones found on street cars. There are four winches on deck for handling heavy weights, and in general wherever motive power is required there is an electric motor and current to supply it. The current for all this, and for lighting also, is supplied by four 300 kilowatt generators which are independent of the main generator used only for the propulsion of the ship.

In addition to natural ventilation, there is a forced ventilation system throughout the ship. Blowers take in fresh air on deck and force it down through the ship while other electric blowers pump out the foul air.

In the galley (kitchen) all cooking is done on ranges which burn fuel oil, and in large copper steam kettles. The bake shop is equipped with an electric dough mixer and two electric ovens with a capacity of 2,400 pounds of bread a day.

Two three-ton ice machines manufacture all ice used and keep the cold storage rooms at a correct temperature for preservation of meat and other perishable foods.

There is a telephone exchange with about 200 connections throughout the ship.

For the care of the sick a modern hospital (sick bay) is provided with 24 beds, a complete operating room, isolation ward for contagious diseases, and a dental office.

All fresh water for all purposes is made from sea water in the evaporator and distilling plant. The sea water is first evaporated, which deposits the salt; the steam is then condensed into fresh water. The plant is capable of making 20,000 gallons of fresh water a day.

There is a newspaper and magazine stand, a canteen for the sale of tobacco, candy, toilet articles, etc., a tailor shop for repairing and altering clothing, and a cleaning and pressing shop. A machine shop, foundry, carpenter's shop and electrical repair shop.

A completely equipped printing office which does all the printing required on board, and in addition prints a weekly newspaper for the benefit of the crew.

Practically every recognized trade or craft is found on board. The men are encouraged to become skilled workmen by practical training on board and by study of the various Navy correspondence courses which are furnished free of cost.

The ship carries supplies of clothing, shoes and other articles of wearing apparel which are sold to the men

TWO MIDNIGHT MEETINGS

Board of Aldermen Meet on Monday and Wednesday Evenings and Transact a Large Amount of Important Business. No Solution of Bus and Trolley Situation

(Held over from last week)

In holding two meetings of the city government in one week, each lasting until one o'clock the next morning, the board of aldermen sets a new record, and one which no one will envy, while, at the same time, there is admiration for the manner in which the city fathers are attending to their duty.

On Monday night, over two hours were taken by public hearings on all kinds of petitions, about two hours for committee meetings and less than an hour in routing business. Every member except Alderman Fitts was present.

There were hearings on pole locations on Turner street, Hampshire street, Hartford street, Pulisier street, Perkins street and Rockledge road at which no one appeared.

Petitions of the Newton Highlands Garage to increase the amount of gasoline kept at 1151 Walnut street, of the Fresca Bros. to keep gasoline at 45 Jackson street of Antonio Pignatelli for a 3-car garage at 29 Florence street of Delbert M. Johnson for a 4-car garage at 1145 Boylston street, of George R. Grant that property at George R. Centre street and Hyde avenue be placed in the single residence district, placing the Froebel school land in the single residence district, on taking land for sewers in Ivanhoe avenue, Decatur street, Silver Lake avenue, relocating corner of Langley road and Jackson street, laying out Ridge avenue, and relocating corners of Cabot and Centre streets, were unopposed.

The petition of John J. Smith for a waiver of set back line at 212 Derby street brought up an old gentleman who could hardly be heard, and later the petition was granted.

The petition of William J. Welch, Jr., for a gas filling station at 58 Crafts street brought out a strong opposition from Miss Hart and Charles A. Robertson.

Daniel F. Barbo favored his own petition for a 4-car garage at 1381 Washington street and there was no opposition.

John T. Burns spoke in favor of his own petition for a 6-car garage in rear of his office on Washington street.

Several persons favored the petition of Philip Turner to place land on Albion street, Albion place, Newbury and Beacon streets in the single residence district and there was no opposition.

Edward H. Powers, Armand C. Bang, Langdon Coffin and Miss Miriam Pierce objected strenuously to the petition of Harold Secord that land on Newtonville avenue be placed in the single residence zone. Mr. Powers closed his oration on this matter by stating that you did not always find a Bulgarian in double houses nor patricians in single houses.

Mr. Joseph T. Bishop spoke in favor of placing land on Langley road and Glen avenue in the single residence zone and a letter in opposition was read.

A large number of persons favored placing property on Lincoln street in the single residence zone, including A. J. Anderson, T. W. Ness, J. H. Wentworth, J. J. Curran, A. M. Curry, W. H. Wright and Dr. McIntosh and the only objection came from John W. Wilson, who resided on Boylston and Hartford streets and "wanted to be let alone." He was later informed that his property was not in the district mentioned and retired to his seat muttering that he only "wanted to be let alone."

Auburndale turned out in force to oppose the petition of Thomas Carberry placing land on Webster and Rowe streets in the manufacturing zone. Mr. James A. Waters represented Carberry and stated that his client intended to use this property to receive automobiles from the railroad. Objections were voiced by H. C. Gaw, H. D. Musgrave, G. M. Marston, W. H. Nash, F. L. Forte, F. P. Stearns, G. S. Stearns and others.

On petition of the Newtonville Improvement Association that parts of that village be placed in the single residence zone was favored by James C. Irwin, Harry D. Cabot, F. W. Davis, F. T. Benner, Hubert L. Carter, C. H. Morse and several others, and strongly opposed in certain parts of the village by Miss Gertrude Estes, William J. Doherty, Chas. F. York, J. T. Gallagher, D. F. Groom, Geo. W. Bishop and others.

The petition of James W. French that Hunnewell hill be placed in the single residence zone also brought out advocates and opponents. Mr. French, George R. Brown, William F. Garcelon, Herbert M. Bacon, Sidney R. Smith, W. H. Cross, Fred E. Harwood, A. C. Johnson, Howard Norton, Chas. H. Barney, J. P. O'Hara, W. M. Ferris, Jr., J. B. Ford, Edward W. Pope, Mrs. Eva M. Fernald, Loring L. Marshall and Mrs. C. J. Brown spoke in favor of the petition and it was opposed by Hon. Thomas Weston in behalf of Mrs. Samuel Whittemore who was developing her land and by Robert Burns of Broomfield road.

Hearings were announced on 85 private garages with objections being raised to only two, Felix Oliveri of Boyd street and William A. Bright, Sumner street.

Mayor Childs sent in a large number of recommendations and communications. He approved the offer of Mr. Samuel Hyslop to give the city 19,000 feet of land on Rustic street, if the city decided to purchase Victory field as a playground, and at the Wednesday meeting, this gift was accepted and $10,000 appropriated for the purchase of Victory field. He approved $16,200 for interest on bonds issued the current year, the suggestion of the City Treasurer that the appropriation for interest on Temporary Loans be reduced by $10,000, $456 for laborers' pensions, $174.50 for payment of expenses of Police Officer William P. Maloney, and that $90,000 be taken from the Excess and Deficiency account and added to general revenue. He also recommended several small additional appropriations.

The mayor sent in the offer of Almarin Trowbridge and others to improve the triangle of land at Centre and Sargent streets, the recommendation of Chief Burke that the pool table license of Ernest Ruza be revoked, the claim of the Underhill-Heating and Ventilating Co. for $464 on account of work at Underwood school, the offer of B. Generazio to purchase for $800 land of the city on Circuit avenue, of Isaac Nesso to purchase for $12,000 land on Lowell avenue, and of A. W. Eldredge to purchase for $900 land on Quinobegun road.

The mayor also sent in the appointment of William A. Sweatt as a constable.

The board received on Monday and approved on Wednesday the name of D. Fletcher Barber for the incorporation of the Reciprocity Club of America and of Rev. Earl E. Harper and Lotta A. Clark for the incorporation of the Civic Music Association, Inc.

Petitions of Edward D. Foley and Paul R. Dudley for truck licenses, of Mrs. Thomas Manning for an intelligence office license of Herbert E. Brayman for a carriage license, of Mrs. G. T. Maloney to move a building on Beacon street, ward 6, of the Norumbega Park Co. to allow children to take part in a theatre on August 2-8, of Michael Foley for a garage license, of J. A. Hanson for a garage license and of F. W. Webster for a garage permit, were granted.

Leave to withdraw was granted on petitions of Mary W. Barrow for change of zoning at Highland avenue and of Rose A. O'Donnell for change of zone at 619 Washington street.

Petitions were also filed from A. Boudreau for a victualler license 283 Auburn street, of Antonio Cloffi for pool tables at 299 Watertown street, for a concrete sidewalk at 106 Walnut street, for sewers in Charlesbank terrace, Waverley avenue and Ellison road, and for laying out of Concolor avenue and Converse avenue.

Orders were passed for $25,025 for water mains, $41,409 for completion of work of extending water main from reservoir to Walnut street; authorizing Mayor to sell city land off Bigelow road, for laying out and construction of Orient avenue, $1,962, Hammondswood road, $3,900, Commonwealth park and Commonwealth park west, $12,400; for widening Chestnut street at Winter street, $412.00; for improvements at Waban square and establishing traffic regulations in Waban square, for sewer in Langdon street, $1,019; for sewers in Taft avenue district, $35,109.50; for sewers in Fuller and Dartmouth streets district, $23,221; and in Waverley avenue, $656.00, $12,260 was voted for improvement of Laundry Brook near Cabot street; $25.00 for settlement of claim of Benshimol, Newton Highlands playground; $245 for settlement of claim of Interflax Signal Co. Hearings were assigned on the widening of Centre street at Sargent St., for discontinuance of land in Waban square; for sewer in Crosby road and changing zoning at Austin street. Zoning ordinances were adopted changing land on Church and Park streets, land on Hammond and Boylston street, and land on Austin street and Mt. Vernon street from private residence to single residence zones.

At the meeting on Wednesday evening the board went into the committee of the whole to discuss with Mr. James L. Richards, Mr. Pitt F. Drew and Mr. H. H. Hanson, the matter of licensing motor busses, and the attitude of the street railway company in the matter of transportation of school children this fall. The company is said to have requested a payment of $10,000 annually to maintain its service, and if not granted, they will refuse to run any extra cars for school purposes after the school year begins. There was a long discussion of the problem, but no action was taken.

As mentioned before, the Victory Field matter was approved and in connection with it the Mayor was authorized to sell Allison park.

At both meetings adjournment was not reached until 1 A. M.

at cost prices, a good pair of shoes for instance costing $4.75.

The laundry is operated at a cost which seems absurdly low, collars, costing but a cent apiece, and shirts, but five cents.

There are three barbers on board, one giving his time each afternoon to the officers.

Possibly the most unexpected trade found while the ship was in the middle of the Pacific was a cobbler's shop, but when one remembers there were nearly 1,400 men aboard most of whom wore shoes, at least part of the day, the surprise ceases.

The administration of justice (if that be the proper title) on ship board is rather unusual. For minor violations of the regulations, the Captain has authority to impose punishments, usually taking the form of days or hours on bread and water in the ship's brig, as the prison is termed. The Captain, may, however, refer the case to a subordinate officer, a Lieutenant, for instance, and the authority of that officer, acting as a deck court, so termed is greater than that of the captain. For the more serious offences, of which fortunately, there are few there is a more formal court, and its findings have to be approved by the admiral. The captain's court is called the "mast," a relic of previous years, when the captain's post was at the mast. Another curious old time custom also survives in a report to the captain at each eight bells. This is said to have been a custom in sailing vessels when there was usually a change of watch at every eight bells and the captain usually had orders to give to the new watch.

One of the interesting officers on the ship is the Chaplain. On the Tennessee, the chaplain, Frank H. Lash held the rank of Commander, a rather unusual rank for this office. In addition to holding regular church services on Sunday and Bible classes thru the week, he has general charge of the welfare work on the ship, acts as librarian for a library of 3,000 volumes arranged and conducts the athletic contests, has charge of the movie shows, which are held each night while at sea, visits the sick, and the men confined in the brig for violation of naval regulations, writes letters home for the men, teaches elementary branches and Massachusetts University extension courses, edits the ship's paper, the Tennessee Tar, etc. The men have wrestling and boxing events, hold tugs of war, give minstrel shows during their spare hours. The profits from the canteen, laundry and tailor shops all go into the Welfare Fund from which the Chaplain provides for the entertainment of the men. One chaplain in each division. I understand is a Roman Catholic and transportation is provided each Sunday when possible for men who desire to attend mass.

The fleet, everyone will recall, was to engage in naval maneuvers on the way to the Hawaiian Islands and on arrival to attempt to capture the Island of Oahu, where the city of Honolulu is located, by constructive warfare. This "constructive" idea was entirely new to us newspapermen, as "construction" in our minds meant actual achievement. In naval circles, however, it means "suppositions." A constructive barrage is merely a supposed barrage, etc.

We traveled at slow speed across the Pacific, as the speed of the fleet was limited to that of the slowest ship in the fleet.

The particular type of formation in which we cruised, and which would be used under actual wartime conditions, was in the form of a huge circle that is approximately 40 miles in diameter. In the center were the dreadnaughts, conveying and guarding the train, the transport Henderson with 1,500 marines aboard, and hospital ship and the auxiliary craft. Beyond this center was a ring of destroyers, and then, finally a fringe of submarines.

In this formation the ships present a formidable battle front that is 42 miles wide, and which is probably the largest front ever presented by any naval force under similar circumstances. A formation of this kind, worked out recently at the naval war college under the direction of the Pennsylvania and formerly professor of tactics at the college, is declared by experts to be absolutely impervious. Incidentally, Captain Laning, is one of the foremost authorities on naval tactics in the world.

Each morning we defended the train from a "constructive" attack by an enemy fleet. The first morning the attack coming from the forward right flank, the next day from the rear, then the left flank, the rear flank, etc., the battle ships and destroyers taking different positions, as the attack indicated. All of this was a tremendous amount of signalling, most of it being done by means of flags. It was interesting to witness the rapidity and sureness with which the flag squads worked. The flag quartermaster prided himself on his ability to read the signals as they came from the admiral's flagship and many times, he had an answering signal out by the time the last signal flag had been shown on the flagship. At night there was considerable signalling by search lights, as well as by the usual signal lights which kept up a constant twinkling as they delivered their messages.

The big event, of course, was the attack on the island of Oahu, pronounced oo-har-you, almost like "Who are you?" As we approached the island, the officers were summoned to wardroom, where the gunnery officer, read the orders from the admiral, and explained the plan as outlined. The last two nights before reaching the island the ships were without lights, giving one a rather weird feeling, not on account of darkness on board our own ship, but with the knowledge that there was an immense fleet close at hand.

The navy plan called for the establishment (constructively of course) of an air plane base on the island of Molokai, some 30 miles from Honolulu, a feint attack at Diamond Head, near the entrance to Honolulu harbor, a major attack on a beach at the northwest part of the island and secondary attack on the beach at the southwest part of the island. As the island is of volcanic origin, most of the shore is precipitous, and there only a few places where a landing could be effected.

The Tennessee was assigned to the southwest attack and as we slowly moved into position, the search lights of the army played all around us, and it seemed as if we surely would be discovered, later that night there were star shells and rockets, but the main attack was postponed until daylight, the first wave of men were constructively supposed to land at midnight, merely went to the transports lying closer ashore and did not actually land until daylight, as it was feared there might be some casualty if a landing on a coral shore was attempted in the night time. As it was, three boats from the Tennessee were considerably bruised in making the landing and one boat from our sister ship the West Virginia was capsized. During the landing, our big guns were "constructively" firing salvo after salvo, to protect the landing party the only noise being that of a one pound gun mounted on each of the big guns as a jockey rides a horse.

The scene that morning was most wonderful as the sun came up behind the mountains of the island, beautiful clouds, and making an inspiring picture of the battleships, transports and destroyers off the shore. Then came the flocks of air planes and sea planes flying over the mountains and the ships and circling to get positions above the enemy planes. It all made a picture which will always be recalled with pleasure and pride by everyone who witnessed it.

The hero of the war in my opinion was Arthur S. Henning, the able Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, who went ashore in the boat of the West Virginia, which capsized as it reached the shore. He then made his way thru the army lines. Walking several miles thru the thick underbrush, he got a lift on an army ambulance and later by a physician's automobile, until he could hire a machine to take him the 20 odd miles to Honolulu, where after changing his clothes and getting breakfast, he was able to interview Admiral Cootz and Major General Hines, the umpires, by one-thirty o'clock that afternoon. He was the only newspaperman who attempted that real wartime experience.

On account of the injuries to our boats, we were detained over night at Barber's point and did not arrive in Honolulu until Tuesday morning.

The city makes a pretty sight from the ocean, as it lies at the base of rocky mountains, which descend towards the sea, forming little valleys, in which portions of the city have climbed. The harbor is small, and Pearl Harbor, some twelve miles westward, cannot receive the large battleships as its entrance is not deep enough. Consequently, the battle ships had to anchor in the open ocean outside the harbor, almost two miles from the landing dock. This fact made most of us leave the ships and engage rooms either at the Alexander Young hotel in the city or at the Moana hotel, some three or four miles outside on the shore.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER

Leverett D. G. Bentley

City Hall is not to be hereafter known as "White Court". We are in a position to make this statement without fear of contradiction. We have positive knowledge that Alderman Thomas W. White, president of the Newton Board of Aldermen, would not countenance such an idea. Therefore we hasten to advise those who believe such a name would be more appropriate for the seat of municipal government of our beloved burg that they are wasting their time. By the way, Alderman White does not waste time, as far as we have been able to observe. Things seem to move along with commendable dispatch under his direction. There is one thing, however, that seems for some reason or other to have been side-tracked notwithstanding the fact that Alderman White is the originator of the idea and would like to see it adopted. And he is not the only one. The Aldermen some time ago introduced an order providing that the Board of Aldermen be relieved of passing upon garage permits for three cars or less. His order would create a special board, comprising the Chief of the fire department, the Buildings Commissioner and the City Clerk. This special board would act on these minor matters and thus save the aldermen a lot of time in committee and in public meetings. It would also facilitate matters for the applicants. To us the scheme is an excellent one. All these officials are called upon to consider these permits and why their judgment would not be sufficient we fail to see. At present the garage question demands the time of twenty-one aldermen and the three city officials as well. It seems to us as if a great deal of energy would be conserved and the city's business expedited if Alderman White's order were adopted. Again the interests of the applicant for a garage permit would be served if he were allowed to place his case before a special board and not compelled to wait until a meeting of the Board of Aldermen. No injury could come to the city, certainly for there are no more alert officials than the City Clerk, the Chief of the Fire Department and the Buildings Commissioner. We cannot believe that an injustice would be done if the Board of Aldermen were not consulted on these smaller garages. On the larger ones, yes, for that is a vital question and one in which the entire municipality has something at stake. At least the proposition of the president of the board might be given a trial.

"Been away yet?"
"Not yet, have you?"
"Yes, just got back."
"Where do you go?"
"Down on the Maine coast. Where do you?"
"Up in New Hampshire. Have a good time?"
"Fine. Hope you will."
"O, I always do. Maine is a nice place."
"Wonderful. You know all about it?"
"No, not much, but I have some friends who always go there. I like the country."
"That's funny, I like the seashore."
"I can't stand the beach—it's too hot."
"Well, I like it. You lay 'round in a bathing suit most of the time. Don't have to worry about dressing-up."
"I don't worry about it either on the farm."
"We get great eats where I go."
"So do we, the old lady is a wonderful cook. Best grub I ever ate."
"We got a splendid cook, too. Never ate such pie in my life."
"I don't care much for pie."
"We do; all my folks are keen for it."
"That's good. Well, glad I met you."
"Same here."
"Good day."
"See you later."

How often have you heard it said, "O, anybody will sign a petition for anything," or, "Petitions don't amount to much, it's easy enough to get all the names you want." We confess that we ourselves have talked in that very strain and believed what we said. It may be that we were right then and are only partly right now. But "getting names" on a large scale is something of an understanding, as recent events have shown. We do not know whether it is still true that on local matters the task of securing voters' signatures is not a difficult one. Investigation shows, however, that the circulation of numerous petitions for the one object, in an attempt to secure several thousand signatures, is bound to encounter no end of obstacles. In fact the man who starts out, fired by public spirit or inspired by selfish reasons, to obtain many names will find his task overwhelming. It may be that people study petitions more closely than they did and are more careful about pulling out their fountain pens or signing on the dotted line as per request. Then again, possibly the fact that only signatures of registered voters are desired has made a finer quality of product necessary. Whatever has happened "getting names" is no longer child's play. We can prove our assertions by events of the past week. The provisions of the initiative and referendum amendment to the Constitution of Massachusetts the operation of an act of the Legislature may be delayed by the filing of a referendum petition. The question is then placed on the ballot at the next State election for the voters to decide whether they want the act to become operative. When this year's Legislature passed the bill for the establishment of a system of compulsory automobile liability insurance, the flat statement was made that the aid of the initiative and referendum would be invoked and the act "beaten at the polls."

Much brave talk was heard of how easy it would be to secure for each referendum petition the requisite number of registered voters (fifteen thousand). The opponents of the bill prophesied victory at the polls in the 1926 election. But, if you will observe, the time for filing the necessary signatures has come and gone and the petition has not been filed. In the matter of the compulsory automobile liability insurance, we are credibly informed, there was so much favorable comment as to the need of such a law that the opponents decided to give up any attempt to file signatures. One man, who is well known for his activity in trying to prevent the passage of the bill by the General Court, said, "Honestly, right here in Boston we found so much difficulty in getting names that we decided that we were licked before we started. We had no idea that there were so many people in favor of the plan. But it wasn't that so much as it was the failure to 'go through' of those we had counted on to get us names. Like everything else we started out with a lot of promises. One man promised us thousands of names and another man so many hundred and so on. We had it figured out that the names would find their way into our place almost by themselves. But we were mistaken. Getting names is no 'cinch.' Apart from this man's experience we are satisfied that it has come to be a sort of industry this securing of signatures. We happen to know of more than one man who makes a business of getting names. For certain purposes the charge is five cents a name and for others 10 cents per name. We do not know just what the distinction may be, but we know it is not a simple matter, or if it were no man would have the nerve to make a profession of it. It is our belief that the public is thinking harder over questions affecting their welfare; that so much publicity is given these matters by the papers that everybody is more or less familiar with subjects of vital concern. If that is the explanation, and we believe it is, then we are glad that "getting names" is a slow process.

Not that we class ourselves among those persons who feel themselves misunderstood, but solely in order to make our position clear for all time we wish to announce that we were never stronger for automobiles than at the present writing. At the risk of becoming too personal we want to say that not long ago we got a lot of "kick" out of a ride through some smaller country towns. It just happened that we seized a fleeting opportunity to take a day off. Accepting an invitation of a friend we proceeded from Newton to Waltham, Sudbury, Wayland, Harvard, Ayer, Lunenburg, Fitchburg, Westminster, Gardner and Hubbardston to Petersham. Our object was to avoid the commonly traveled highway and pick out the smaller villages. It was successful. We stumbled upon many interesting things. We found, for instance, that Lake Boon is a delightful spot and that here the water rights are owned by the American Woolen Company. Eager to learn what earthly use these water rights are to that company with no mills in sight we ascertained a most interesting fact. It appears that years ago when wool was purchased from the farmers in that vicinity the waters of Lake Boon were used to wash the wool when sheared from the backs of the sheep. Not an alarming discovery, to be sure, but a bit of interesting information. And so we made it a day of gathering just such scraps of simple knowledge. We studied an experiment in farming by a group of ultra-highbrows at one small town. We looked things over pretty well and as a result were not disposed to dispute a regular dirt-farmer in the neighborhood who assured us that the experimental farmers were "letting the places go to the devil." Some day we hope to settle the question for ourselves. We think that further description of our readers unless they were to undertake a similar journey themselves, our aimless travels would not interest. And in that connection we believe that we have discovered the ideal way of covering the ground with an automobile. We used to do these things on foot, though it would never be our good fortune to jog along in a car, meet interesting people and get side-lights on some individuals we do not meet every day. It can be done, however, and in our opinion is both delightful and profitable if one wants a good loaf with a thrill in it.

"SEEING THINGS"

Those who rushed wildly home to destroy their "home brew" after seeing a magnificent horse dash on four wheels through "Main Street" today, are assured that they were not seeing things.

The home brew was not to blame but another equally popular beverage. The "wheeled" horse was Moxie's famous "horsemobile".

It stopped for refreshments, not at the "Sign of Moxie", but at the gas station; for the Horsemobile is "not at all particular". It drinks gasoline like an ordinary horse drinks water, and far more frequently.

This strange vehicle consists of a completely equipped automobile chassis on which is constructed a life-size statue of a beautiful horse. The driver sits on the horse's back and guides it with a steering wheel, much like an ordinary automobile. The arrangement of the shifting levers and brakes is original and will prove interesting to mobile mechanics.

Mr. Frank Archer, Jr. is touring New England with his Horsemobile in the interests of the Moxie dealers. Those who have not seen the Horsemobile can now see this ingenious advertising device—the only one of its kind in existence.

Many a girl who isn't pretty makes up for it in other ways.

THE HEADLIGHT MENACE

(From the Lewiston Journal)

Unless automobile makers do something about the headlight, automobilism is going to be hurt as a pastime.

The matter rests with the makers of automobiles, who have done so much to improve the car itself.

There is no need of more than one-half the light that the headlights diffuse. Dimmers are not used by one automobilist out of 100. The Ford car is the worst offender of the lot—its lights running on magnetos working up powerful blinders.

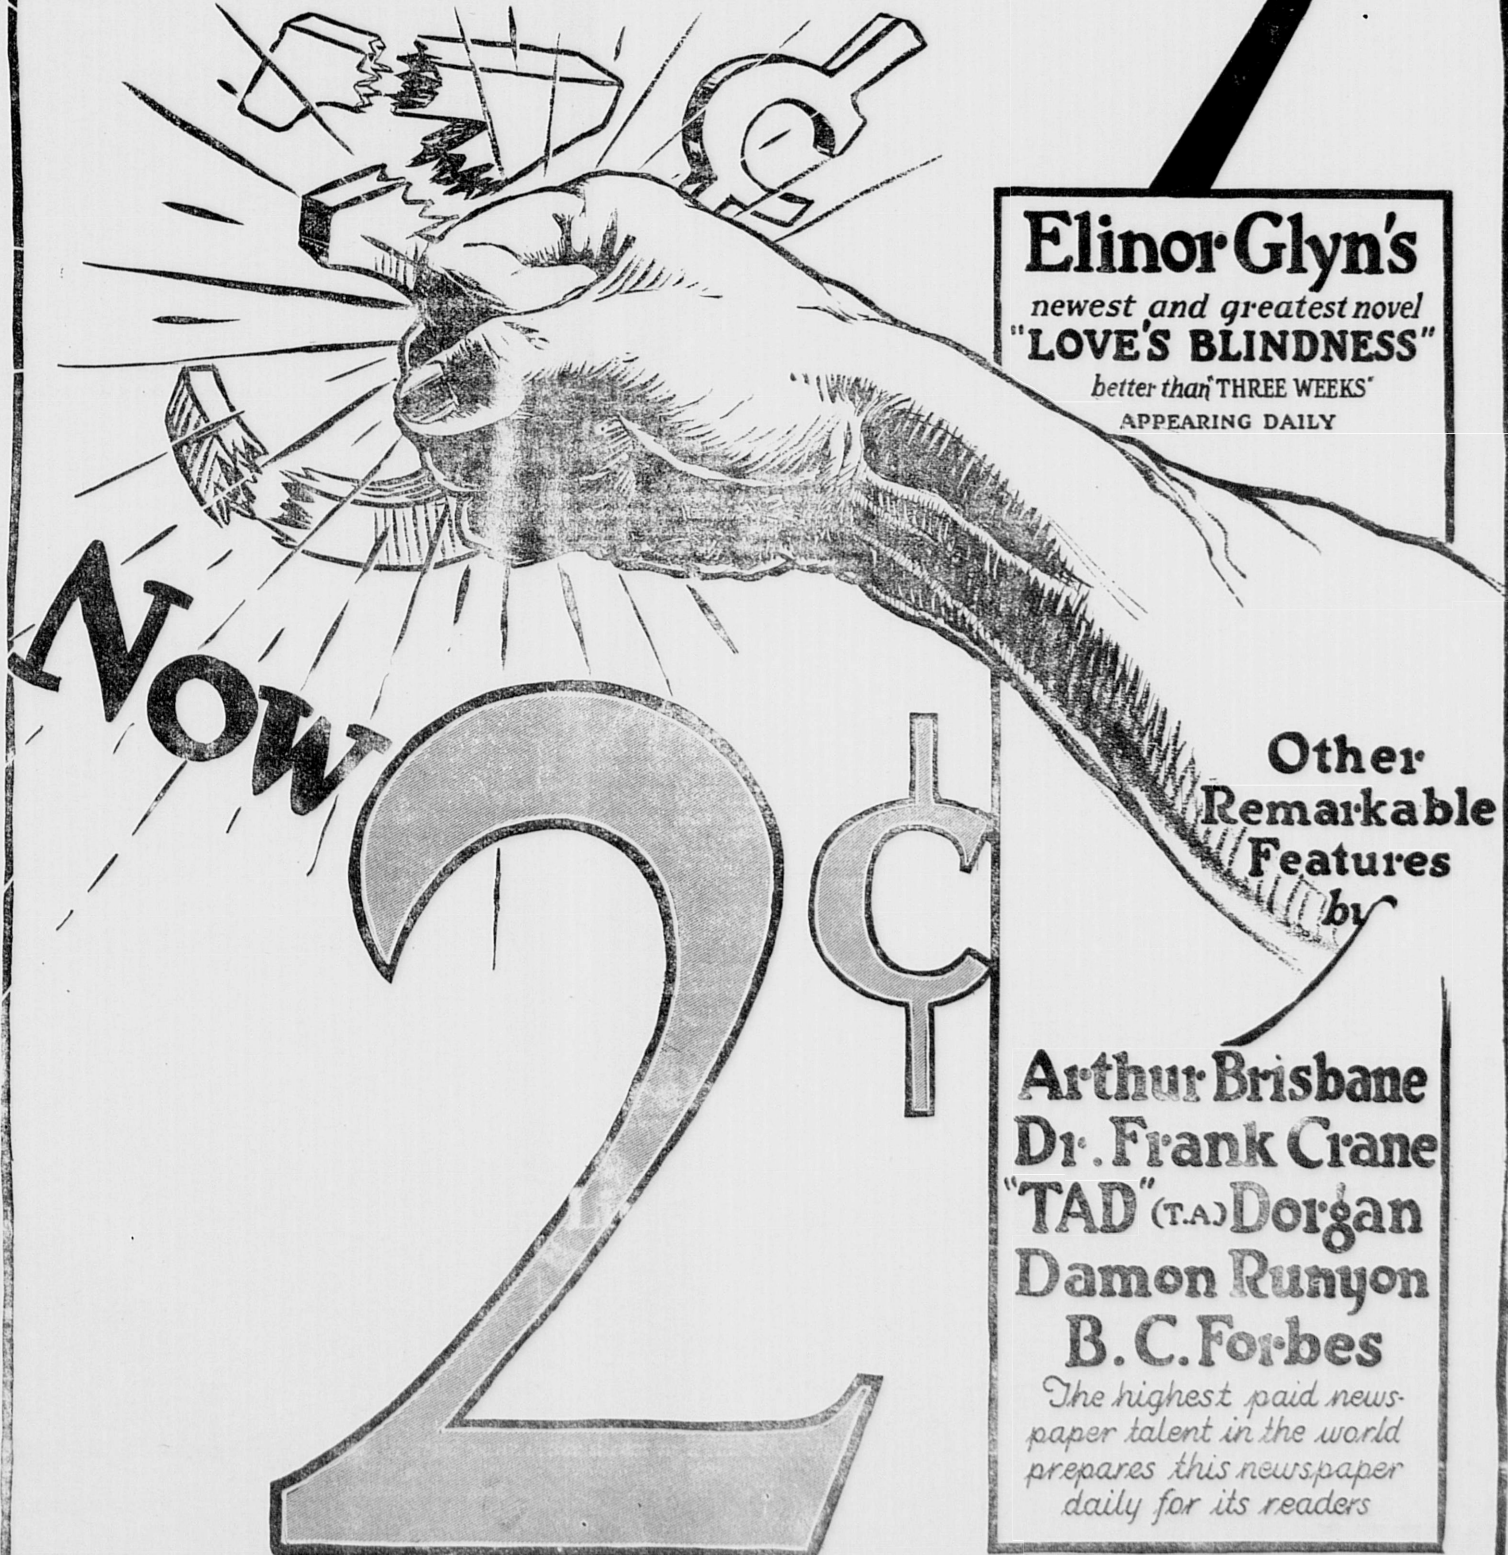

We have talked with fifty or more automobilists this year who say that the evil is growing. They have cut out night-riding. These lenses that are said to "diffuse" the light are no relief, as a rule. The lamps are all too bright and the demand for brighter and brighter lights is growing unchecked as far as we can see. It takes nerve to drive thirty miles on a narrow road, facing a procession of blinding, glaring lights.

We suggest that here is a real problem for automobile-makers that requires solution.

Among things that will rise again when crushed to earth are truth and a swatted fly.

While no one likes to pay an increase in the price of telephone service, we have sufficient confidence in the personnel and ability of the Public Utilities Commission to accept their decision approving some increase in telephone rates.

The protests of men like Mayor Curley are meant for the gallery and for political effect and should be discounted for those reasons. The Commission's decision is based on facts and not theories or mere guesses and sensible men and women prefer facts to political buncombe.

The report of the aldermanic committee on the matter of improved fire signal service should be read with care by every tax payer. One phase of the present situation has not been touched by the committee except in a very indirect manner. We refer to the growing tendency for automobile drivers to race for a fire whenever an alarm is rung in. This custom handicaps the firemen in reaching and fighting the fire but is a serious menace on account of an increase in speeding on our highways. If bell alarms could be omitted on a first alarm, it would be well worth the cost of installation.

Some years ago, the editor, as a representative in the legislature opposed the passage of a bill which would allow Sunday sports at events where no admission fee was charged. We did so, as we were fairly certain it was but a step in the direction of a commercialized Sunday. That prediction has now proved true as, under the blanket of the pernicious initiative and referendum clause of the constitution, a bill allowing Sunday afternoon base ball games at which admission could be charged, will be on the ballot for a popular vote at the state election next year. We now predict, that in case of a favorable vote on this question in 1926 another attempt will be made in the Legislature of 1927 to allow Sunday sports at any hour of the day.

While the purchase of Victory Field will undoubtedly furnish a precedent for future purchases for playgrounds in which the city will provide all the funds, instead of, as in the past, requiring the citizens to contribute something towards the result, we believe a greater mistake was made in authorizing the sale of Allison park. In our opinion it would have been better to purchase Victory Field for the present and retain Allison park for the future, when a larger play ground will certainly be needed.

The success of the recent Kiddies' day under the auspices of Newton Lodge of Elks has been copied by the Waltham Lodge of Elks, who entertained 2500 children of that city at Norumbega Park this week.

Don't let Brookline's reduction in the tax rate lead you to believe that Newton will also enter the envied class of lower tax rate cities.

BOY SCOUTS

This was formerly the meeting place of old troop 9, and has not been used for scout work for some time until troop 3, was organized in the spring. Mr. Fred L. Smith of Perkins Street, is chairman of the Troop Committee of this troop.

A Court of Honor will be held Wednesday evening, August 19th, place and time to be advised those scouts that are reported ready for tests at this time. Certifications by scoutmasters of scouts readiness for examination must be in the hands of the Executive before August 15th.

NEWTON HOSPITAL

Week ending August 1. Patients in hospital 111, patients paying as much as cost of care or more 45, patients paying less than cost of care 40, free patients, including babies 26, babies born 12, patients treated by out patient department 70, accident cases 5, social service calls at hospital 7, at homes 2, patients transferred by social service car 1.

During the month of July the hospital admitted 370 patients and discharged 368. The smallest number in the hospital for any one day was 84, and the largest number 127, the daily average number being 111.32. Sixty babies were born at the hospital during the month. The out patient department treated 346 cases, the x-ray department 173, and the eye clinic 10. Sixty one accident cases were cared for. There were 266 operating room cases of which 30 were major operations. At the hospital 58 social service calls were made and at homes 18 calls.

The sixty babies born during July, sets a months record at the hospital the best previous record for any month having been 55 babies in March 1924. If the hospital may be taken as an index of what the rule is today, and there is anything in the old belief that a preponderance of boy babies means war and a preponderance of girls means peace, then an era of peace is ahead for the babies born during July, 41 were girls and 19 boys and of the girls two were twins, last week the record was 10 girls, 2 boys.

The seven hospital students who took the state examinations for registration as nurses in July, all passed, five of them with honors and all with marks above the average.

Forty five different doctors performed operations in the hospital operating room last month.

One of the accident cases treated last week was that of a two and a half year old child, who climbed out of a second story window and fell to the ground while her fourteen year old sister was feeding the baby sister of nine months. Fortunately the child escaped without serious injuries.

Miss Herrick, the social service visitor at the hospital, is now on vacation and the social service work during her absence is being done by Miss DeRocco.

Last month, the ladies who worked at the hospital surgical supply room in the making of surgical dressings were, Mrs. C. E. Hills of Wellesley Farms; Mrs. F. L. Buell of Auburndale; Miss Mary Elder of West Newton; Miss Evelyn Miller of Waban; Miss Annie H. Spain of Waban and Miss Dorothy A. Irving of Quebec. These ladies gave several hours of their time to the hospital and the work they did was a great help as the call for surgical dressings is constant and growing. If only enough other ladies would volunteer to make it possible for the hospital to get on hand a large reserve supply of dressings those who took part in the work would do something that would win the heartfelt thanks of hospital, doctors, nurses and patients. What the demand is for dressings may be judged from the statement that in one recent major operation it was necessary to use over seventy of the largest dressings.

In war time the women of Newton made an outstanding record for the number of dressings they sent to the front, but the needs of peace times are just as imperative, and the work done now in making dressings at the hospital is for those who are neighbors and associates and the patients for whom they are most needed are women.

DEATH OF MRS. PARSONS

Mrs. Charlotte Converse Parsons, who passed away last Friday, after a long illness, was the wife of Hon. Herbert C. Parsons, deputy state commissioner on Probation.

Mrs. Parsons, whose maiden name was Severance, was a native of Greenfield, and on her father's side was descended from the first settlers of the town. On her mother's side she was related to the Converse family so widely known in the eastern part of this state. Mrs. Parsons continued her residence in Greenfield until 1912, when the family moved to Brookline, later taking up their residence on Hammond street, Chestnut Hill. She was a member of the Congregational Church in Greenfield, and besides her husband is survived by a daughter, Miss Harriet Louise Parsons, who lives at home.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday, Rev. Edward M. Noyes of the First Church officiating, and the interment was at Greenfield, Mass.

NEWTON ROTARY CLUB

The midsummer season is rather hard on the luncheon attendance at the Rotary club with so many members away for their usual summer vacation. Arthur LeBaron presided at the luncheon Monday noon at the Woodland Golf Club and there were a number of visitors from other Rotary clubs.

The entertainment feature of the meeting was in the hands of a professional Musical Magician, Mr. F. O. Harrell, a resident of Bullough Park, Newtonville. Mr. Harrell gave some pleasing musical selections on rather odd instruments, his playing of one of Mendelssohn's Songs without words on ordinary tumblers and wine glasses being most effective. Mr. Harrell also performed some clever tricks with the aid of a "magical" fan.

BASE BALL

The West Newton A. A. colored will play the Stearns team of Malden at the West Newton playground on Saturday afternoon. The Stearns played the Newton "Y" team last Saturday and final result was 1-0, in favor of the "Y" team. This game will start at 3 P. M.

On Monday evening at the West Newton playground the colored boys will play Bernie's all-star team of Newton Upper Falls, who have one of the best teams of this section of the City, with Neale Mahoney of the Saxony Mills team to catch for them on this evening, they are out to make the game a most interesting one from the start.

This game will start at 6.15 P. M. sharp to get in a full game of baseball.

Mr. Charles E. Roberts, a well known resident of West Newton, died suddenly last Monday night from heart disease. Mr. Roberts was a native of England and has been a resident here for thirty-five years, where he has been engaged in business as a forester. He was 72 years of age.

He was a member of Lincoln Park Baptist Church and of General Hull Lodge, A. O. U. W.

Frederick W. Peakes, pastor of the Lincoln Park Baptist Church officiating and the interment was in the Newton Cemetery.

THE PATHWAY TO PARADISE

"How shall I find it, and which way lies
The pathway leading to Paradise?"
For dark and long is the road I tread;
And its end is lost in the mist ahead.

I met a man with a heavy load
Toiling along the dusty road.
He answered my question in mild surprise:
"True work is the pathway to Paradise."

I met a group with laughter and song Passing the woodland ways along.
They sang their answer: "This way it lies,
And joy is the pathway to Paradise."

I met a woman and little child.
I asked my question. The mother smiled
And looked down into her baby's eyes:
"O, love is the pathway to Paradise."

Y. M. C. A.

On Fridays at 2 P. M. the Y. M. C. A. has as their guests boys from the various playgrounds of Newton. They are given a shower and a good swim in the pool. This feature of the summer program has proven very attractive to the boys. Last Friday there were fifty boys in this group.

One reason for extending the swimming privileges to the boys from the playground is to promote swimming instruction to all the boys of the city. Mr. William Alexander of Boyd Playground, and Mr. Robert MacPherson of Burr Playground have charge of the instruction which is given free of charge as are the swimming privileges. When the boys pass the required test they are awarded a small pin to denote that they are full-fledged swimmers.

Friday, July 31st, Manager Becker of the "Y" Junior Baseball Team, attended the final meeting regarding the Braves Knot Hole Baseball League. The schedule of games was drawn up, and it was decided where these games were to be played. Newton drew "Bys" in many of the games. This cuts the Newton games down to five possibly four. Saturday is the first of the series when the Newton boys open with the best two out of three games with Dorchester "Y" Team at Dorchester. The second game will be in Newton on Saturday the 15th. If Newton wins two out of three they will then play the East Boston Boys' Club. If Newton wins from the East Boston Boys' Club and then wins in the finals, she will then have an opportunity to play at Braves Field, August 28th, in conjunction with the Braves and Chicago Cubs. It is hoped that the Banny Bancroft will coach one of the Knot Hole Gang's team and Rabbit Maranville the other.

The following teams are entered in the Knot Hole Gang's Baseball League: Newton Y. M. C. A., Cambridge Playground, Lynn Newsboys, Roxbury Boys' Club, Boston Playground, Chelsea Playground, Beverly Playground, Denison House, Y. M. H. A., Catholic Charitable Bureau, and East Boston Boys' Club.

Newton's team entered in Knot Hole League: Henry Pamboukian Capt., Fred Becker, Manager, William Pearce Asst. Manager, William Sutcliffe, Robert McArdle, Robert Pickard, Frank Perry Jr., George MacNeil, James Maguire, and Hugh Manning.

The Baseball team visited Roxbury last Thursday evening and were defeated by St. Joseph's 8-1. "Bob" Pickard pitched a beautiful game for the locals. A return game will be played at Newton this week when the local team hopes to clean up the Roxbury boys. "Bob" Pickard will again be on the mound. Maguire will handle the game at Dorchester on Saturday.

A beautiful loving cup presented by The Hubbard Drug Company of Newton was won by the Senators of the Junior Y. M. C. A. Baseball League for holding first place in the league. The trophy is a very attractive one of which the boys may well be proud. It is of silver, gold lined, eight inches in height and five inches in diameter. In the centre of the cup is a raised gold baseball emblem surrounded with a laurel wreath of gold. There are fitting handles on each side.

The boys will always have this cup to demonstrate the interest and kindness of the Hubbard Drug Company. It will serve as an incentive to the boys to put the best they have into baseball and other competitive games. The "Y" Junior League of which the Senators were members consisted of the Braves, Yankees, Senators, and Giants. There were fifty or more boys who played in the twenty-four game series conducted for Junior members of the Newton Y. M. C. A. The League opened April 25th and closed June 25th. Much interest was shown and it was from these teams that most of the members of the present junior team was chosen.

The following boys were on the winning team, the Senators: F. Becker, Capt., Van Buskirk, Gibson, Schwartz, M. Becker, Hunt, Lodge, Bernier, Farley, and Stoney.

ANNUAL OUTING

In spite of the dismal weather of last Saturday morning, nearly 400 members of Newton Lodge of Elks gathered at noon for their annual outing and their optimism must have affected the weather man, for the afternoon was as pleasant as one could wish.

The outing this year was held at Danforth Farms Country Club in Saxtonville, and was under the direction of an efficient committee of which Wilfred Chagnon was chairman.

The annual ball game between the benefactors and bachelors was won by the former nine, 20 to 5. Franz Bagley twirled for the bachelors, and John Gordon pitched for the benefactors. In the golf tournament, on the nine-hole course of the Country Club, Al Herrington turned in the best gross in Class A, an 82. Ed White had the best net, 76. Tom Franey won best gross in Class B, scoring an even 100, and the net went to Frank Wilcox, 94. An old-fashioned clambake dinner was served with green corn, steamed clams, roast chicken and fixin's. It is planned to hold another outing next month.

BURR ATHLETIC BASEBALL TEAM

The Burr Athletic Club, a new baseball club in Newton, desires baseball games with such teams as the Bernie's All-stars, Highland A. A., and other teams in the city. This club has challenged the Newton Pals and expects to arrange a series of two out of three games with them for the championship of Wards 1 and 7.

The club will give the Pals ample time to fulfill the challenge and if it isn't fulfilled within a reasonable time will claim the championship of the city.

This team is composed of Newton High school players: The line-up is as follows: Leahy and Monihan the catchers; Schlieparker, Whitmore and Pass, pitchers; Holmes Whitmore, L. B. Sutcliffe, 2b., G. Holbrook, 3b., Sullivan, 3b., Leahy, c.f., W. MacPherson, l.f., H. Whitmore, r.f.

NATURAL LAWS IMMUTABLE

Mr. Darrow asserts as his personal belief "that the universe acts and always has acted in accordance with immutable laws." How then can he reconcile that statement with the hypothesis that ages back, the amoeba, contrary to immutable law did not bring forth "of its kind" another amoeba simply, but something at least beginning approach to a higher form of life than itself—and also that more complicated organizations continued to follow, even until human life was reached. For no such law is now observable, is there? Anthropoids still produce anthropoids. Nothing in the vegetable or animal kingdom reveals any such law now in existence. The microscope may disclose, in embryology, that the human embryo is indistinguishable in form from that of a swine; yet the human never departs from its sure law that only a man or another swine will finally be the immutable result. Eggs of a dinosaur, if laid a billion of years before discovery, would not a single one of them have hatched but "of its kind." Immutability is nature's law, and always was so? Then why argue as if in some far gone era, (or Genesis "day") natural laws suffered some "rare sea change" into "something rare and strange" as Evolutionists suggest? Apparently an inconsistency, somewhere.

Yet the very eyes of the trilobite, one of the oldest of fossils, were evidently quite as perfect as the eyes today of a humble bee. As a scientist, before discovery, would not a single one of them have hatched but "of its kind." Immutability is nature's law, and always was so? Then why argue as if in some far gone era, (or Genesis "day") natural laws suffered some "rare sea change" into "something rare and strange" as Evolutionists suggest? Apparently an inconsistency, somewhere.

And does not the world Evolution, itself need a more careful defining, for many who use it for description of what is but a development only.

Developments are a common occurrence, or can be brought about easily,—as Mr. Burbank, e. g., has been doing for years, constantly. He can develop a new plum, or cherry or strawberry of superior excellence.

But it remains a plum or new variety of cherry or strawberry, always; never "evolves" into a blueberry, or the plum into a chestnut. He is a "wizard" in development.

But though a professed believer in Evolution, is probably as anxious for the discovery of the "missing link" as are all other eager scientists, living in hope that the next excavation in Babylon or Arizona may turn up to the surface the long sought evidence that their theory was not mere hypothesis. But "immutable law," "universal and forever"—who surmises it was mutable if only we go back far enough? Not millions, billions or quintillions of our little planet's revolutions about the sun; but—just imagine an eternity of the past when all things, atoms and their electrical contents, were governed by not "immutable law" but subject to mutable changes, "in flux,"—yes, imagine if you can!

But within recorded time, at least, no single new change, as of a given species of life, has ever been found to contradict nature's "immutable laws."

But alas! That we so often "know" so many things that are "not so." How about this?

GEO. G. PHIPPS.

BENEFIT GAME

On next Friday evening, August 14, at the West Newton playground, the West Newton A. A. (colored) will play a benefit game of baseball for player Joseph Finlay of the Earnshaw Mills baseball team.

Finlay a few weeks ago was hit on the head with a thrown ball by a pitcher, while playing at Dorchester, that resulted in concussion of the brain. The Finlay boy is now at the St. Elizabeth's Hospital, where is a patient waiting to undergo an operation. And feeling the need of financial aid, the colored boys gladly consented to give their service to help the fellow.

As the management of the Earnshaw team knew they would be a good attraction, with such players as "Zing" Rice, and "Jit" Taylor of Everett High school; Sheep Jackson of Malden High; Lomas of the Boston Tigers; Gadsden of Newton Junior High; McCleary of Newton High and Harry Gray of the "Y" present a strong

While the Earnshaw team will have Amos Switzer the former Saxony pitcher; Howley and Murphy of Boston College; and the Lyman brothers. They intend to give the West Newton colored boys a good battle for that evening.

This game will start at 6:00 P. M., sharp to give full nine innings of baseball. In case of rain these two teams will meet on the following Friday evening, August 21.

The entire proceeds will go to player Finlay.

MY ALIBI

I'd rather take my fountain pen
And write this cheery junk.
Than spend my time with solemn things
Or pessimistic bunk.
I'd rather make one chuckle chuck.
I'd rather make one grin.
I'd rather make one smile break out.
On one old hard-boiled chin;
I'd rather cause an honest laugh
As I pass through the years,
Than spill some piffle that would pump
Ten million quarts of tears.

It is to be hoped that all those who throw rubbish by the wayside continue their vandalism by carrying home great bunches of poison-ivy.—Boston Transcript.

CHAMBER OUTING COMING

The annual outing of the Mercantile Division of the Newton Chamber of Commerce is to be held on Wednesday afternoon, August 26, at McPeake's Shore Gardens, Nantasket. This is in accordance with the vote of the general mercantile committee of the Chamber, which considered the question of an annual outing, in connection with several other matters, at a well attended meeting at the Chamber office late last week. The Newton Corner Business Men's Outing will be merged this year with the Chamber outing, this arrangement promising one of the most successful and large-attended events yet held by the merchants of the city.

Following the transfer of the activities of the former Newton Board of Trade to the Newton Chamber of Commerce, the business men at Newton Corner continued the annual outings for the succeeding three seasons. Last season, the Newton Chamber of Commerce joined in an outing with the Brookline Board of Trade in August, following the Newton Corner outing which was held during the preceding month. While both outings were successful and largely attended, it was the opinion of the mercantile committee that continuation of the plan of two annual outings would be less satisfactory than to combine the interest and enthusiasm in promoting one big event, of equal appeal and attractiveness to all sections of the city. The Newton Corner representatives of the committee agreed readily to this plan, which was adopted unanimously by the committee.

With the Newton Corner committee already organized and more or less tentative plans adopted to hold their outing at McPeake's Gardens on August 26, the committee voted to let those arrangements stand. The date was satisfactory to all, and it was unanimously agreed that there are few more attractive and better equipped resorts, available for an event of this kind, easily accessible by automobile from this city.

The plans provide for an Automobile parade, to leave Newton Corner at about 12:30 P. M. as in past seasons, transportation will be furnished those not having cars of their own. The tentative suggestion of the transportation committee provides for four of two or three of the villages of the city which can be reached without undue detours, before the departure for Nantasket. A chicken and lobster dinner will be served immediately after arrival and an entertainment program will follow.

The big outdoor feature will be a base ball game. Newton Corner vs. the Whole Wide World. Newton Corner has various baseball artists, whose diamond ability is well-known, the consensus of the committee opinion being that this group will prove worthy opponents of the best nine players that can be produced by the rest of the city.

The subsequent list of field sports will include a variety of events, some calling for athletic prowess, others for expert skill in various lines of endeavor, and many planned for launch producing purposes only, in which the non-participants will probably find as much fun as those taking part.

The joint committee includes the following as representatives of the Mercantile Division of the Chamber: George A. Schade and Frank Avattaggio of Newtonville, Norman M. Appleyard and Guy H. Proctor of Newton Centre, George G. Sherman and John F. Kershaw of Newton Highlands, Gordon H. Rhodes and Robert J. Coulter of Waban; Ira S. Roe and George P. Brophy of West Newton, Henry Dane and Louis Fried of Norantum, Harold F. Young and Ralph E. Keyes of Auburndale, and James H. Cochrane of Newton Lower Falls, while those comprising the Newton Corner Committee are Harold Moore, George C. Campbell, Raymond E. Williams, Frank J. Perry, William M. Cahill, John T. Burns, Hugh S. Boyd, Wilfred Chazmon, Frank Fell, and Manuel Bloomberg.

Harold Moore was elected chairman of the general committee and George C. Campbell treasurer. The following have been elected as chairmen of the respective sub-committees: Sports, Norman M. Appleyard; Tickets, George C. Campbell; Transportation, George A. Schade; Decorations, Raymond E. Williams; Entertainment, John T. Burns; and publicity, the secretary of the Chamber, Pennants, flags, and other decorative features will be provided for autos, and one ticket will entitle each holder to both the dinner and everything else on the entire program. It is then expected that tickets will be ready for distribution at the next meeting of the committee, on next Tuesday, at which time reports will be submitted by the various sub-committees and all arrangements completed for the entire event.

Following action on the outing, other matters were considered by the committee. The meeting was presided over by Ira S. Roe, Chairman of the Mercantile Division and one of the vice presidents of the Chamber. The recent Dollar Day activities were discussed and interesting reactions were submitted by various members of the committee. It was the consensus of opinion that future Dollar Days should be All-Newton affairs and that two Dollar Days or similar events per year—one in the spring and one in the fall—would give more satisfactory results than to attempt to hold them more frequently. It was so voted, and the secretary was instructed to call another meeting of the committee early in September to consider plans for the first event of this schedule.

The question of sidewalk vegetable and fruit stands was discussed at some length, chiefly the peculiar type of business ethics practiced by some of the proprietors. It was voted, however, that no action be taken. The question of seeking further amendment of the Building Code so as to make possible the construction of apartment houses in certain sections of the city—where permissible under the Zoning Ordinance—was considered and it was the opinion of the committee that there would be a noticeable beneficial effect on local business if this could be brought about. The secretary was instructed to secure an expression of opinion from the Directors of the Chamber at the next meeting of that body.

MIDSUMMER MEETING

Aldermen in Session Twenty Minutes. Buss Regulations Still Under Consideration

A special meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held last night to draw up the budget for the coming year and to confirm the election officers as appointed by the Mayor. Only twelve members of the Board were present. Aldermen Baker, Bliss, Ball, Crosby, Flitts, Hinckley, Norman F. Pratt, George W. Pratt and Walton being absent. The audience consisted of Mr. Pitt Drew and Mr. Harry Hanson of the M. & B. St. Railway who were present in hope of action being taken favorable to their petition for bus service on Walnut street.

Alderman Lloyd introduced the subject of bus service by presenting an order which he had drafted. He said that owing to the scanty number he felt that the matter should not be gone into then but should wait for the consideration of the entire Board. His suggestion that the matter be tabled, meeting with no objections, was tabled until next meeting.

The order upon which the Aldermen will act at the next meeting follows: Ordered that His Honor the Mayor be requested to arrange a contract with the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway Company to be submitted to this Board for its approval. Said contract to provide for the operation of Busses on the Watertown to Needham line, Newton Centre to Newtonville line, Newton Highlands to Lake street line and one line operating between Newton and Waltham,—and to provide that the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway Company furnish sufficient extra busses to transport High School pupils,—and to provide that the City of Newton shall reimburse the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway Company for any loss they incur in transporting High School pupils in a sum not to exceed $10,000.00 per year, this payment to be contingent upon the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway Company not making a fair return upon their investment actually in use in the cities of Waltham and Newton,—and that the term of this contract shall be for not more than five years, and it is hereby further ORDERED That the sum of $1667 to be taken from the Excess and Deficiency Account, be and is hereby appropriated, granted and expended under the direction of His Honor the Mayor, to carry out the terms of this contract for the period from November 1st to December 31st, 1925.

The following jurors were drawn: for the Superior Criminal Court at Lowell, September 8th, Raymond Forte, 25 Warwick road; Charles E. Hodges, 3 Churchill street; Thomas J. Gildea, 97 Adams street; for the Superior Criminal Court at Lowell, September 14, John J. Gill, 51 Warwick road; Thomas D. Gotshall, 46 Arlington street; for the Superior Court of Civil Business at Cambridge, September 8th, 1st Session, Harry G. Frothingham, 73 Ashton avenue; Frederick W. Yelland, 309 Waltham street; Charles E. Gammons, 49 Cross street; 2nd Session, DeWitt R. Tompkins, 30 Berwick road; David E. Osborne, 949 Chestnut street; Horatio C. Hawks, 20 Furber Lane.

Election officers as appointed by the Mayor were confirmed.

An appropriation of $37,198.74 was made for a sewer in Taft avenue and private land. This appropriation was made after the Mayor's veto on the same question as originally presented some time ago was sustained. Alderman Earle in explaining the matter said that the sewer was to go through land which has been set aside for cemetery use. The Cemetery Corporation wished the sewer to follow the lines of the avenues that it is planned to construct in the future. The original order planned a direct route for the sewer but in view of the fact that the Roman Catholic Archbishop at Boston and the Cemetery Corporation has given the city an easement Mr. Earle said that he hoped the Board would uphold the Mayor's veto and pass the new order which increased the appropriation by $2,200. This action was taken.

Hearings were assigned for the next meeting on sewers in Crosby road and Randlett park, and on the discontinuance of a portion of Oak street, Newton Upper Falls. The Board then adjourned until the 14th of September after a "lengthy" session of twenty minutes.

NEWTON MAN DROWNED

Mr. Charles Whittemore, a resident of Shornecliffe road, Newton, a young man of 24 years was drowned last Monday morning while on a motorboat trip, near Falmouth.

In the boat with Whittemore were Crocker Snow of Buzzards Bay, a junior at Harvard, and Philip Thorns, 14, of Woods Hole.

The party went out shortly before noon in Snow's launch, the Indrah. When about a mile and a quarter from the Falmouth shore, the launch was suddenly swept by a high, rolling wave which struck the 18 foot craft on the starboard side and keeled it over so that it shipped several hundred pounds of water. The three youths were thrown head first into the sea.

The launch had a left-hand drive and was operated by Snow. When the wave struck the boat it threw Whittemore against Snow and made him lose control of the craft. All three of the young men wore heavy oil-slickers buckled up to the neck as protection from the flying spray.

Though it shipped considerable water the boat finally righted itself, but the engine was stalled.

In the meantime the struggling trio in the water were making a valiant effort to rid themselves of their slickers, but were finding difficulty due to the high sea. Finally Thorns and Snow succeeded in freeing themselves and then helped Whittemore off with his. He complained he was a bit tired, so Snow kept paddling about near him, while Thorns made for the motor boat which was drifting not far away.

Snow swam up alongside of Whittemore and asked, "Do you mind if I turn around a bit so as to get rid of this coat?" Whittemore said, "All right." When Snow had removed the coat and turned back, Whittemore was nowhere in sight. Just then Thorns threw out a life preserver to Snow who swam about for more than 20 minutes searching vainly for his missing companion.

Finally the boat with Thorns aboard was washed ashore and a few minutes later Snow himself with the preserver about his waist drifted in.

Both boys were badly broken up by the tragedy and immediately telephoned to their relatives at Buzzards Bay and at Falmouth. They also notified the Coast Guard Station and Rum Chaser, No. 239, with a volunteer crew put out and searched for signs of Whittemore.

Whittemore is survived by his widow a small child, his mother, Mrs. Annie L. Whittemore of 19 Howard street, Newton; and three brothers, David, Barrows and Robert Whittemore.

The body was recovered Wednesday afternoon, by the crew of the schooner

A CORRECTION

Newton, August 12, 1925.
Editor Newton Graphic,

Dear Sir:—
In your issue of August 7th is an account of the aldermanic meeting of July 27th containing reference to the hearings on restricting certain parts of the city to single residence districts.

In mentioning my remarks against restricting a section of Newtonville avenue, you facetiously dignify them as an oration and quote me as saying, "You do not always find a Bulgarian in double houses, nor patricians in single houses."

May I correct a slight error in this quotation? What I did say was "Because one lives in a two family house, it does not follow that one is a vulgarian." I never make invidious comparisons of any race, be it Slav, Nordic, Latin or Celt. Perhaps my enunciation was faulty.

Yours very truly,

EDWARD H. POWERS.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S ANCESTORS

From King Philip's War to Revolutionary Days

In the anniversaries that have been celebrated about Boston in the past few months all have been of revolutionary events, yet this is the anniversary also a war, (older by a hundred years) as harrowing, and much more horrible than, the Revolution. King Philip's War found the colonists as brave and staunch in the defense of their homes and families as did these latter days, and with much more danger and with less to count upon for aid. Sparsely settled localities and bands of vindictive redmen, fighting from ambush, made a very terrifying combination. Whatever the causes of this war, whatever the justifications on the part of the Indians in seeing their lands gradually taken from them, and on the part of the settlers in seeing their homes attacked, and families murdered, it remains a history of terror and heartbreak both to the settlers and to the Indians, uncivilized and Christian.

We know that around Sherborn, Newton, and Natick, there were many so-called Christian Indians, taught by Rev. John Eliot and Rev. Daniel Gookin, and we know that these paid many a friendly debt to the early settlers, due to their love for these two men who had so ministered to them. We know, too, that in the former of these towns there occurred as horrible massacres and reprisals as occurred anywhere in Massachusetts. Some of these events, while they may not have been of vital concern to the State as a whole, do mark the destinies in lives and history of some whose descendants today are also interwoven with their country's history, and as such are romantic episodes to repeat.

In 1674 Sherborn—after several unsuccessful attempts to secure a charter—did become a township. (Of this two hundred and fiftieth celebration which took place October 12 and 13, 1924, with several persons prominent in Newton history active participants, an account may be given later.) On February first, 1676, there took place the Eames massacre, at Mount Waite, Framingham, at which spot there stands today a memorial of this tragic event. In the same year Medfield was attacked and half the houses burned by the savages, sometime before 1680, young John Coolidge—son of Ensign John—who, born in 1662 at Watertown, had the distinction of being the youngest soldier in this Indian war—was given his farm in Sherborn. The Indian deed of this purchase is still in existence. In spite of his youth, John Coolidge rendered scout service throughout Worcester County that is attested in records as to his bravery, quick wit, and usefulness. This while his good father, Ensign John, was rendering equally valuable aid in building stockades for defense against Indian attack.

In 1704, the grandson of Edmund Rice of Sudbury fame suffered through a similar attack of savages, when his entire family was massacred or taken into captivity. The grand-daughter, Martha Rice, as has already been said, married Jonathan Coolidge, brother to Ensign John. And now let us see how peculiarly the histories of three families, Coolidge, Eames, and Rice, were interwoven in the thirty years of this time of the colonies.

It was while Ensign John Coolidge and his young son John were engaged in Worcester County—especially in Brookfield history—that the Eames massacre occurred. Thomas Eames was born in England and came to the Colonies about 1634, living in Dedham, Medford, Sudbury and Framingham. He was a bricklayer and mason by trade, and somewhat handicapped by lameness. He was twice married, his second wife being Mary Paddenfoot, widow of Jonathan, and the daughter of John Blanford of Sudbury. Thomas Eames was most active in the war with Philip, being Captain of a Division that was searching out the marauders. Whether or not this was the reason for the attack of the savages upon his household while unprotected is not proven, but on the first day of February, 1676, while Thomas Eames was away getting provisions at market for his family the Indians attacked the little homestead on the south side of Mount Waite, and Thomas returned to find his home a smoldering mass, and the charred and scalped bodies of his dear ones among the ruins. He was unaware that any of his children still lived, nor did he hope to see any of them again.

But from the first day of February until May the boy Samuel, then probably about nine years of age, and his two older sisters travelled with the Indian band westward. There is a pitiful romance connected with this unhappy story, in that the elder of the two girls became beloved by an Indian brave, and it is believed she cleverly used this happening to bargain the freedom of her brother and sister. What must have been her suffering in relinquishing forever all hope of her own escape, and in seeing depart these two of her own blood whom she so loved, no one will ever know! But she was martyr enough to sacrifice her own future, and to give up the loving company of her younger sister and brother in order that they might return to civilization. We can only hope and pray that some measure of happiness came to her as recompense.

In no other way is it possible to account for the escape of these two children from the keen observation of a savage band, unless they were deliberately allowed to depart, while the band—bribed by the girl's promise to wed one of their number—pretended blindness. For days the children followed the rising sun, remembering the advice of parents, who in those days taught such woodcraft as the dangers surrounding required, and living on such berries and foods as the woods afforded.

Then came a day of discouragement, when they seemed no nearer finding a settlement than when they had started on their perilous search for civilization, and they debated whether or not they were aiming after all in the right direction, or should turn back.

Whether they were in accord or arguing we are not sure, but there is the tradition that the boy wanted to keep going eastward. That they were saved the fatal mistake of turning westward, with its dangers of wandering savage tribes, was due to another bit of forethought of their parents. We can almost imagine the shout of joy and relief with which the lad found some plantain leaf, and so knew they must be near some settlement, for they had been taught that this plant did not grow in this country, but had been brought here from England! A little further now, with new hope and courage, and they came upon a Connecticut village, where they were kindly cared for, then sent back to their amazed and thankful father in Framingham!

It is thrilling to realize that the grand-daughter of this brave lad became my own great-grandmother, for when the small boy grew up he married Patience Twitchell, and their son, also Samuel, married Eunice Fuller of Newton in 1750. Their daughter, Eunice married John Coolidge of Natick, in 1780, who was a Revolutionary War Soldier, and the great-grandson of the small boy, John Coolidge, who acted as scout in King Philip's War.

There have been rumors that there is Indian blood in our President. As yet we have found no basis for this, and sometimes we wonder if this old tradition of the Eames family may not be the thing which has been the cause of this statement. Even so, of course there is no Indian blood in this branch, for it is not from the girl who remained behind that there is Coolidge descent, but from the small boy who escaped from his captors.

We do not think, however, that Calvin Coolidge can claim to be an ancestor, for his branch had located in Sudbury or Marlboro. We do feel, however, that in spite of the statements of some genealogists that he is descended from Simon Coolidge, that there is a chance that he is more closely connected with the Sherborn branch. Sudbury and Marlboro were Watertown grants of land and settled by Watertown residents, Framingham, Natick and Sherborn were closely interwoven in territory, and not dissimilar at the present time. Framingham also was closely allied to Marlboro. Tracing these lines, then, is not so simple as it would seem, for names were repeated in the generations, and with many branches moving about among these few early settlements records become confused.

We are still hoping that it is not from Simon that the President descends, for so many more interesting things happen in other branches that it would be nice if he could claim to be from any service in King Philip's War, nor do we find his descendants in the French and Indian War a hundred years later.

In most of the Coolidge branches changes in residence have been few, and it is this splendid quality of "staying put" that has helped so wonderfully in tracing the genealogy. Just as a direct descendant lives on the old grant of land in Watertown today, so a direct descendant lives on the old Sherborn homestead. Strangely, this man's grandson John purchased a lot from the Indians in Natick in 1745, just as it was the grandson of the first settler in this country whose farm was likewise purchased from Indians in Sherborn. The Boston branch of the family made just this one change, except for two of the Natick sons who went to Boston. The Cambridge branch made this one change. It is amusing, therefore, sometimes to hear of "old" families in a town, to discover that the father or grandfather was the first to come there!

The first John Coolidge in Sherborn was Town Clerk for five years and a Selectman for ten years. His son, Isaac was a Major of Militia, a Selectman for three years, and served as a Representative in the General Court for five years. He married Hannah Morse, daughter of famous old Captain Morse whose history Sherborn is so proud to own. John's daughter, Hannah (Coolidge) married Dr. Jonathan Fairbanks, and no one familiar with Massachusetts history need be told who he was, or what the Fairbanks family stands for in the towns surrounding Dedham.

Isaac's son, John was the man who was commissioned Captain in the French and Indian Wars by George the third, and he was Deputy Sheriff for this King. As such it became his, possibly unpleasant, duty to execute two Indians of Charlestown, Mark and Phillis, for the murder by poisoning of their master, Capt. John Russell. Enforcement of law and order, and holding public office is assuredly a trait of the family! It was this man's son, John who was in the Revolutionary War, and who married Eunice Eames of whose history more later.

Another grandson of this first John Coolidge to reside in Sherborn gave service in the French and Indian Wars—his father being James, the brother of Major Isaac—a service that cost him his life. Hezekiah, born in 1729, received his degree of A. B. and A. M. at Harvard, and served as an ensign in the above war, dying at Crown Point in December, 1761.

A Coolidge daughter of these days married Dr. Samuel Porter of Sherborn, who besides the glory of his ministerhood, when he was called one of the "three sterling ministers of the town," achieved the distinction of grafting the wonderful "porter apple," which delights the appetite of youth today, as did his sermons on 1758, delight the souls of his adult congregation. I love to think that his wife, being a Coolidge, gave him some clever suggestions that helped to concoct the "Porter!"

To go back to another family connected with Coolidge history, Edmund Rice was the first of this name in this country and he settled in Sudbury in 1639. That he made high place for himself is shown by the records of his day and time, for there can be no mention of this town without mention of Edmund Rice, as leading in its affairs. He was evidently much beloved by his townsmen, trusted and respected. He was one of the original petitioners to make Sudbury a town, was a Selectman, a deacon, a Justice of the peace, and as a member of the General Court was universally spoken of as "Goodman Rice," as tribute to his splendid character and honorable dealing. Today we have in our State Senate one of his descendants, and he comes from our own City.

It was Edmund Rice's grand-daughter, Martha who married Jonathan Coolidge, and the only thing I have against her is that she didn't fall in love with brother Simon—if he does prove to be the President's ancestor—just so that he could say that he was descended from this excellent man.

But there is a most fascinating history connected with Edmund Rice's grandson, also named Edmund, who married in 1692, Ruth Parker of Roxbury. Strangely he suffered in 1704, practically the same horrible experience as did Thomas Eames, his family being attacked by the Indians and ten murdered, while two—Silas and Timothy—were taken into captivity into Canada. These boys were given Indian names, evidently were loved by the tribe and placed upon a pedestal, for Timothy became one of the six chiefs of the Cognawega Tribe, and as such it became his fate to address a speech to Colonel (afterwards General) Burgoyne, when the latter was engaged in an expedition against Canada in the French and Indian War in 1755. (At which time back in Sherborn, Massachusetts, John Coolidge was giving such service as made him Captain in 1762.) Silas and Timothy married Indian women and lived contentedly with the Cognawega Tribe.

Another Edmund Rice, of course of the Cognawega Tribe, and as such of the first Edmund, served in the Revolution, and was at the Battle of Bunker Hill. He lived to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of this battle, when Lafayette was here, and he rode with other survivors to the laying of the corner stone of the Monument. Strangely, there rode with him John Coolidge of Natick, who married Eunice Eames.

It is these coincidences of early history that make the reading of records anything but dry and uninteresting to one who reads with imagination as well as with the eye.

And now we come to those most stirring of all days—the Revolution. Believe it or not, there were three John Coolidges who had the exciting pleasure of being present at the battle of Bunker Hill, and no less than sixteen Coolidges who hastened to Lexington and Concord on the night of April 18th, or in the early dawn of the 19th, these men having enlisted as Minute Men. Later these same men enlisted in the regularly formed companies, and, tracing by regiments which served at Bunker Hill on the 17th of June, they were there present, unless for some reason such as illness or wounds or accident, they did not report, and there are to be found no official records that any of these men were so absent. We may safely assume, therefore, that at least sixteen of the name, Coolidge had the thrill of being at Bunker Hill.

10,000 MILES O'ER LAND AND SEA

We were received with open arms by the press and people of Honolulu and a long and varied program of entertainment provided for the ten days the fleet was to stay in that port. The Press entertainment committee established headquarters at the Young Hotel, provided us with typewriters, newspapers from all over the country, and with most gracious clerks in charge.

We had hardly got ashore before I had an invitation to an automobile ride around the island that afternoon—a temptation I could not resist even though the rest of the guests were strangers. If I had realized, however, that one of the party was a gin soaked colonel of the marines, I am sure I should have waited for a better opportunity.

Otherwise the trip was a most interesting one, beginning with a fine view of the Pali, (Hawaiian for cliff). The Pali is a precipitous cliff, high up in the mountains, in a cleft between two higher peaks. Here it is said in 1795, one of the big chiefs of the islands drove thousands of the inhabitants up the mountainside and to their death over the edge of the cliff. Now there is a fine road to the Pali and another road out of the mountain beyond. There is a wonderful view from the Pali, over peaceful lands devoted to pineapples, to the shore and sea beyond. The wind pours through this notch at a tremendous speed, sometimes taking the tops off of automobiles. One of our party in some way got caught by the wind in such a way that he had to fall down to stop himself from running before the gale.

The trip around the island includes over a hundred miles, of mostly good roads, and there are frequent views of the ocean and surf.

The Mormons have a community on the island and have erected a fine temple, surrounded with beautiful gardens, almost in the heart of the island.

Nearing Honolulu on our return we had a good view of the vessels lying in Pearl Harbor, the greatest naval station owned by Uncle Sam. Pearl Harbor is one of the largest land-locked harbors in the world, and held at that time over 150 vessels of various kinds, not including battleships. It has a large dry dock, a powerful radio, gigantic cranes and immense machine shops. Somewhat later we visited Pearl Harbor on a local tugboat, and were surprised at the possibilities of concealment, other than from air planes, which existed at this point. The channel to the harbor, however, is narrow and tortuous and ought to be deepened and straightened in the near future, to enable our largest ships to take advantage of its facilities.

We passed thru Schofield Barracks, in the center of the islands where a large force of the army is stationed. In looking about the city, one is impressed with the large number of Japanese in the place. They are everywhere in business both as clerks for white employers as well as in strictly Japanese stores. The Japanese women retain their national costume including the little wooden sandals, which are held on the foot by a strand over the big toe and which makes a little clicking noise in walking made by the dropping of the heel.

The open air garages seen odd to Eastern eyes, being mere roofs, with open sides, all the machines being in full view from the street.

While the fleet was at Honolulu, the streets were gay with the white uniforms of the men allowed shore leave, several thousand being given such liberty each day. The fleet assists the local police in handling these men by a system of shore patrol, members of which patrol the streets and see that the gobs behave themselves.

The handling of such a large number of men, mostly boys, is some task, especially in a rather small city like Honolulu and one could well see the reason for limiting shore leave to not later than six o'clock. It speaks mightily well for the boys that in the first 10,000 men allowed shore liberty at Honolulu, there were only 7 reported for drunkenness.

While visitors to Honolulu have gone into raptures over its wonderful climate, and it certainly is well worth all the eulogies that have been said, the outstanding feature of the city in my mind was the beautiful flowers, which can be seen everywhere. The hibiscus is the most prominent, and I was told that there were some 2,000 varieties of this beautiful flower on the islands. It blossoms in almost every garden with a profusion of orange and white flowers, of all sizes. The huila, (Hawaiian for "sweet heart") is another prolific flower shaped like the blossom of the trumpet vine and frequently covers the wall and roof of the houses.

We had an interesting experience in visiting the cannery of the Hawaiian Pineapple Co., Ltd., the largest concern of its kind on the islands, if not in the world.

I was surprised to learn that it takes from 18 to 20 months to grow pineapples and that it is an irrigated crop at that.

The Hawaiian Pineapple Co. handles about 350 tons of fruit at one time, the fruit is dumped into hoppers and placed on the conveyors of the Ginaca-Stanley automatic pineapple machines. In the first operation of the Ginaca, the "pine" is made to engage a high speed revolving knife and a perfect fruit cylinder is thus "sized" from the fruit. The cylinder then passes into a revolving turret in which top and bottom ends and core are removed. Simultaneously with the "sizing" operation the outer skin or rind, slit into halves, is forced against a grid within which a second knife revolves which severs from the skin the edible portion of fruit meat obtaining. This meat, a choice part of the fruit, goes into crushed products.

From the Ginaca the pineapple cylinder slices enter an endless belt which carries it to the trimmers. Hundreds of women and girls, each wearing rubber gloves and neat cap and apron, sit at the trimming tables and with knives remove any portion of shell remaining.

The trimmed pineapples are put on an endless belt and carried to the slicer. Here after being washed, they pass through a set of stationary knives and are sliced. These slices are carried on an endless belt in front of a row of women and girls who place the pineapple in cans. As it passes before them, these packers make their selections of the fruit according to the desired grades. In all this process the pineapple is not touched by naked hands.

The packed cans are next taken to be syruiped. They pass automatically, at about eighty cans a minute, through a revolving machine where the flow of syrup into each can is carefully regulated.

From the syrup machines the cans pass automatically to a steam-heated exhaust-box, where heat drives out most of the air and prepares the can for sealing.

Some idea of the size of the pineapple business can be gathered from the fact that the American Can Co., turns out 125,000,000 cans each year.

We had lunch at the cannery and were shown the splendid facilities for serving food to the 2,000 employees of the Company. Various priced lunches are served cafeteria fashion, one for cents including a substantial amount of beef steak, rice and bread. Everything was spic and span clean as the proverbial whistle.

One of our first experiences in Honolulu was a visit to the Royal School, where there were about 1,000 children, of seventeen different nationalities, none of them white. Mr. Cyril Smith, the principal of this school has accomplished wonders with these children. We witnessed a most complicated calisthenic drill, by all these children, done to music, and without any leadership, and failed to note any child out of harmony with the drill.

One feature of the exhibition was a march in which the children formed the word "Aloha" the Hawaiian word for welcome. After the drill Mr. Smith showed us his method of teaching writing to the music of the phonograph and which he claimed produced results in half the time taken by other methods.

One slogan at this school caught my eye, it was as follows:

"Three things worth while
To be good, to do good
And always to smile."

Another interesting trip was to the plant of the Oahu Sugar Company just outside of the city of Honolulu, as guests of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters Association. I was surprised to learn that sugar is an irrigated crop and requires an enormous amount of water. This plantation of some 11,000 acres, uses 90 million gallons of water a day and has a water supply plant that costs over two million dollars.

We were told that it took a ton of water to produce a pound of sugar—a rather striking comparison. I was told that it takes eighteen months for sugar cane to mature and that this particular company divides its plantation in halves, with sugar maturing on about 6,000 acres each year. This company produces about 58,000 tons annually and employs about 2,500 persons, supporting a population of 9,000, which live on the plantation.

Sugar cane is not unlike our field corn. When it matures, the leaves are either burned off or stripped off by hand, cut down and taken in small trains to the factory. Later on I saw one of these little engines named after P. C. Jones, a former well known resident of Newton. Arriving at the factory, the cane is carefully weighted and throughout its passage thru the factory, an accurate check is kept of this item of weight. The cane is ground and the juice extracted in multiple roller mills arranged in series. The juice is then heated to about 310 degrees and taken to settling tanks from which it passes thru several processes of evaporation until it reaches a stage of syrup, containing about 60 per cent of solids. It is then heated again in vacuum pans, until crystallization takes place and then by means of centrifugals, the sugar is separated from the molasses, and is ready for the refinery. There is but little sugar refined in the Islands, most of it being sent to the continent for that final stage of development.

Besides these trips to the leading industries of the Islands, we were entertained with receptions by the Mayor, a dinner by Governor Farrington, a party by the Chamber of Commerce, a party by the Outrigger Club and a "hukilau" or fishing party and a "luau" or fish dinner.

Governor Farrington was the host at a delightful dinner at the executive mansion, and rarity of rarities, there was no after dinner speaking. Instead we were entertained by a lantern parade by the Japanese residents of Honolulu, and a most spectacular event it proved to be. The Japanese had made elaborate plans for the parade and there were many beautiful, every gorgeous floats in a long line of marchers. One, in particular caught my eye. It represented a huge hibiscus and was most beautiful as well as unique. During the dinner and after the parade, we greatly enjoyed the singing of a large Hawaiian choir from one of the city churches. The soft, beautiful harmonies of the native music entranced us all and many of us stayed for two hours listening to their singing.

Governor Farrington showed us the bed of the last Hawaiian ruler, the Princess Liliuokalani, which is kept as a show room in the executive mansion. The peculiar thing about this bedstead is its unusual width—it being fully seven feet in that direction and over six feet in length.

The fishing party took place on Sunday, about twenty miles out of the city. The "hukilau" is a great net which is carried well out to sea by motor or row boats, dropped to the bottom and gradually brought to shore, enclosing whatever fish might be in the vicinity. On this day the hukilau was not particularly successful but that event had been anticipated and it made no difference in the "luau" or feast which immediately followed.

Here we had all kinds of Hawaiian dishes including the celebrated "poi." Poi is made of the ground root of the taro plant and resembles a rather stiff custard of a light gray color. The natives divide it into "one finger," "two finger" or "three finger" poi, depending upon its consistency for poi is eaten off of the fingers, which are dipped into the bowl, and you lap off the poi which sticks to them. One finger poi is the stiffest, two finger poi a little less stiff and three finger poi is almost liquid. The flavor is evidently something to be cultivated and seems rather tasteless to me and one trial was sufficient. Eating fish with one's fingers was also a native custom and came rather awkward to some of us. But by and large it was a most interesting and unusual entertainment. After the luau we had a number of hula hula dances and Hawaiian songs. The dancers were all rather large women, caused I understand by constant exercise and the dances were neither graceful nor beautiful, and might easily become disgusting.

One of the interesting trips about the island was to Pearl Harbor, which has so often been mentioned in the news papers. I was impressed with the concealed location of the Harbor as one approached from the sea. It was hard to realize that within a short half mile of our tugboat, there was one of the largest harbors in the world. The entrance is narrow and treacherous, but inside there is plenty of room and even sufficient depth of water for all the United States navy. The government has erected here a vast dry dock, very large machine shops with gigantic cranes, powerful radio and wireless plants and every facility for a first class naval base. We were shown some large oil tanks, erected, we were told by Mr. Doherty, at his own cost and risk, after government proceedings had been brought against him, solely to be ready for any emergency. These tanks are slowly deteriorating, notwithstanding the efforts of Admiral Macdonald, the commandant to be given authority to save them. This could be accomplished by merely allowing oil to be placed in the bottom of each tank, but Washington authorities have this far refused to grant even this reasonable request, about as idiotic a proceeding as could be imagined.

We also visited the mortar battery at Fort Ruger, where there are eight 12-inch mortars, each having a range of about eight miles. They fire a projectile weighing a half ton at the rate of one shot per gun per minute. This battery protects the entire city of Honolulu and covers the entrance to Pearl Harbor. Another interesting fortification is at Diamond Head, the interior of which, an extinct crater, is reached by a tunnel thru the mountain.

We were all put up at the Oahu Country club, which has one of the most beautiful locations on the island, being far up the mountain side with a wonderful view over the city and the ocean beyond. While we were there the battleships laid at anchor in full view of the club verandas and one of our newspaper men called attention to the $350,000,000 drop curtain of the club. The club has a most attractive house, and uses its spacious verandas for dining parties, the clinging vines on the ceiling, adding an unusual note to the scene. The golf course is picturesque and interesting. On account of the elevation of the club there are frequent showers of what the Honoluluans call "liquid sunshine." On one afternoon I experienced five of such showers while playing one round of golf, and reached the club house practically dry. Another time, while caught in a shower at a hole well up on the mountain side, I had the unusual experience of seeing a rainbow form between myself and the mountains, so near that I could almost touch it.

The Bishop Museum in another part of the city has a large collection of Hawaiian curios and relics, including several of the feather cloaks of their ancient chiefs. These cloaks are considered so valuable that they are only exhibited twice a month. It must have taken millions of feathers to make even one of them, and the labor of many days. With only one feather from a bird, some idea can be gathered of the number of birds on the islands in the past.

I must confess that I was somewhat disappointed in the much exploited Waikiki (pronounced Wack-y-kee) beach and the surf riding. Both of these have been widely advertised as the most unique attraction of Honolulu, but I failed to see the reason. In the first place, Waikiki beach is but 150 feet in length, with coral lying outside if one ventures beyond these limits. It is less than a hundred feet wide and as the tide rises and falls but 18 inches, there is not much difference between high and low tide. To us who have seen Revere and Nantasket beaches, Waikiki seems very ordinary and is certainly greatly over-advertised.

The surf board riding and outrigger canoe sports which centre at Waikiki Beach are also over stated, especially from a spectator's point of view, for the reefs and rollers necessary for these sports are a third to a half mile off the beach, making field glasses necessary if one would witness them.

While we were on the island, the Japanese observed their Boys' week, said to be the most spectacular outside of their New Year's celebration. On this occasion outside of every home which has male offspring, large paper carp are suspended to the wind on tall bamboo poles, while within the homes, figures of old heroes are exhibited as models for boys to follow, and rare delicacies are laid for the family. It is generally a grand time for boys who are recipients of many gifts from friends of the family, and if the occasion is the first for the first son, the celebrations are most elaborate. These paper fish are gifts to the parents at the birth of every son, the size of the fish indicating the wealth of the giver.

These decorations added greatly to the appearance of the landscape, for the Japanese are not only numerous in the islands but they are also prolific.

MOTHER
A myriad stars in the midnight sky
All mirror their light in the sleeping sea;
But only one mother in days gone by
Has loved, uplifted, and shielded me.

There's only one mother the wide world o'er
Who knows my heart in its great and small,
Who lovingly watches and wins me more
As autumn nears and the sere leaves fall.

And a mighty chorus, unnumbered, great,
May sing at last round the heavenly throne;
But only one mother will watch and wait
For me, the boy who was hers alone.

EDITORIAL

With a total increase in expense of over $225,000, our taxpayers are indeed, fortunate that there is no increase in the tax rate of last year. This is due to the tremendous increase in building which has taken place the last two years and is a factor that cannot be relied upon year after year. Indeed, in the opinion of real estate experts, we have already built beyond our needs.

The real remedy for a low tax rate lies with our city government and it should be noted that about $140,000 of the total increase is in the annual city budget. Tax payers should make a study of these figures and act according to the conclusions drawn from that study.

The bus problem is vexing our city fathers and deserves all the study and investigation possible. We recall the time not over 25 years ago, when there was intense rivalry among street rail way companies for franchises in the streets of this city and the promises and agreements which were made for this or that other location. At the present time the conditions imposed on street railway companies have mostly been changed by state authorities or have been deliberately ignored by present companies, and are not worth the paper on which they are written. Let us see to it that the bus question is settled right.

The Mayor had his choice of pleasing the Italian vote or the Legion vote in his recent approval of the appointment of a police sergeant. The Italian vote won.

MAXTED-PEAKES

The wedding of Miss Olive Maisie Peakes the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Fred W. Peakes and Mr. Ralph Burman Maxted of Western Springs, Ill., took place last Saturday evening, at the Lincoln Park Baptist Church of West Newton, where the ceremony was performed at eight o'clock, by the father of the bride, and the pastor of the church.

The bride wore white satin trimmed with chintilly lace caught up at the side by pearls. Her maid of honor, Miss Marian Ellen Kimble of New York, was in flowered chiffon in shades of pistache and pansy.

The best man was Mr. Harold Denison of New Haven, Connecticut, and the ushers were, Messrs Francis P. Jones of Auburndale, and Donald E. Pratt of Albany, New York.

The church vestry attractively decorated with garden flowers, ferns, Queen Anne's lace and hydrangea was the scene of a reception after the wedding, a feature of which was the singing of Miss Olive K. Burrison of West Newton.

Mr. and Mrs. Maxted were assisted in receiving their friends by the best man, maid of honor, Rev. and Mrs. Peakes, Mrs. John Maxted and Mrs. George Staples, sister of the groom and Mrs. Asa Pratt of Clinton, Maine, grandmother of the bride. Among those present were Mrs. Grace Arnold and daughter, Mavis of San Dimas, Colorado, an aunt and cousin of the bride.

The bride who has been for two years a missionary worker among the Italians at Davenport House, New Haven, Connecticut, graduated from the Baptist Missionary Training school in Chicago, in 1923. The groom graduated from Oberlin College in 1922, and from Yale in 1925. He is to be the Y. M. C. A. Secretary of the University of Vermont.

After a wedding trip to Drakes Island, Maine, Mr. and Mrs. Maxted will reside at Burlington, Vermont, where they will be at home after September 15.

An interesting feature of the wedding was the failure of the bridal couple to obtain a marriage license from City Clerk Grant, being under the impression that a license from New Haven, Connecticut, was sufficient. It took prompt action and a waiver of the five day requirement by Judge Bacon to allow the wedding to take place as planned.

NEWTON HOSPITAL

Week ending August 8. Patients in hospital 97, patients paying as much as cost of care or more 33, patients paying less than cost of care 39, free patients, including babies 25, babies born 10, patients treated by out patient department 73, accident cases 15.

Girl babies are still in the majority at the hospital, of the ten born there last week eight were girls and only two boys.

Miss Carey, the social director at the Nurses' Home, goes on her vacation this week.

Mrs. Stevens of Chestnut street, Waban, sent to the hospital this week a fine lot of beautiful gladioli.

Dr. Watters and Dr. Keever of the hospital staff are enjoying a fine vacation in Nova Scotia. They took an automobile with them on the boat to Yarmouth and from there made trips to many places. They visited the homes of nurses who have been connected with the hospital and called on Dr. Fessenden who is spending his vacation at Smith's Cove.

There was a meeting of the Know More Kokki Klub on Monday evening. Those at the hospital do not take very seriously the theory propounded this week by an English doctor that babies cry only because they are imitating sounds they have heard. One of the nurses asks "When a baby gives its first cry whom is it imitating then?"

Nurses at the Nurses' Home had a treat of real Maine blueberries this week, a generous helping for every one of them from the half crate of berries sent down by Miss Allen, the superintendent, from her summer home at Sedgwick.

Judge Bishop who was at the hospital for an operation on one of his knees has gone home and the Rev. Mr. Ellis, of the Central Congregational Church at Newtonville, who has been at the hospital seriously ill from sinus trouble is now on the mend.

Miss Houston returns next week to take charge at Founders and Miss Grant who has been in charge during her absence goes on vacation.

A doctor from a distant city with his wife visited the hospital this week with one who is interested in it. He was much interested in the story of its beginning and the work it is doing and was impressed with its atmosphere of friendliness and the evident morale of those serving it. "Where I come from," he said the hospital is largely dependent on the manufacturing concerns of the city for it is their employees who furnish the majority of the patients. Their contributions to our maintenance are liberal but are generally regarded a charge against their businesses. Your situation is very different your hospital is, I understand, a hospital for all the people of the city and dependent on contributions from all the people, but I take it that actually only a comparatively small proportion do contribute. That will be so until you succeed in making all the people realize what a hospital like yours means to a city like Newton.

One thing as I see it, you should do as soon as possible; you ought to have more operating rooms and you should have an accident room and an accident reception room distinctly apart from the regular operating rooms. The hospital with which I am connected in my home city, is so arranged that accident cases never interfere with the regular surgical cases, our accident cases have separate operating rooms and treatment rooms used for accidents only. Another thing about your hospital surprises me. You have for nurses a group of splendid young women, at least the equals of any I have met in any hospital, and yet my wife, who visited their living quarters tells me they are surprisingly inadequate. In my city we are more fortunate for we have a splendid building as a nurses' home given and furnished by one of the big manufacturing families of that place. You have land enough to furnish the site for a home that would be a credit to your hospital and a lasting memorial to the one fortunate enough to donate it. Your hospital is really a beckoning opportunity to your generous and wealthy citizens. And here is a curious fact, if you are given the nurses' home you ought to have, the building will no sooner be up than there will be other citizens who will wonder why they were not wide awake enough to give it."

Of the patients in the hospital last week, just over a third of them paid as much as the cost of their care or more.

THE NEWTON ARCHERS

The Newton Archers on Saturday afternoon had fifteen entries out and some very good scores resulted.

There were two guests from a distance. One of them was a man from Windsor, Vermont, who has made a wonderful flight shot of more than four hundred yards, one hundred more than any other man was ever known to send an arrow with his two arms. As might be expected, this man was tall and powerfully built.

The range is in good condition this year, the grass being unusually green, and the archers make a pretty sight, as they line up to shoot.

REAL ESTATE

The office of Sullivan & McCarthy announces that they have sold for Helen C. Farrell to Elsie J. Kellar, a lot of land corner of Grove Street, and Woodland Road, Auburndale, consisting of 7000 feet. To Martin Rooney it sells four house lots on Tremont Street, Brighton, for the Shillaber Estate. The new owner will improve with four new houses. It sells for Ellen J. Lane some 29,000 square feet of land on Boylston Street, Newton Highlands, to S. L. Hughes.

The same office announces the sale of a very choice house lot of 10,000 feet on Beacon Street, in the Reservoir section. John Riedl conveying to Deane M. Freeman.

Final papers have passed in the sale of the Kinley estate, Mt. Ida Hill, Grace L. Kinley conveying to Louise E. Walters of Boston.

CHAMBER OUTING

Tickets for the annual outing of the Newton Chamber of Commerce, to be held at McPeake's Shore Gardens, Nantasket, on the afternoon of Wednesday, August 26, are now on sale throughout the city. Members of the outing committee are entering enthusiastically into the task of working out the many details of the event, and especially in the distribution of tickets which were placed on sale on Wednesday of this week. One member of the committee disposed of his entire quota of twenty tickets in as many minutes, while the unusual interest in the event and the rapidly increasing demand for tickets indicate that other members of the committee will also experience but little trouble in disposing of their allotments in a short time.

The plan of including all features in the price of one ticket, which was applied so successfully last year, will again be followed this season. The price of tickets for the coming outing is $4.00 each, which will pay for everything, including one of the finest dinners that McPeake's Gardens can put out, for an entertainment to follow, for the smokes, decorations for automobiles, in fact everything that is desirable or necessary for a thorough good time, including transportation for those not having cars. Those having cars are requested to help in the solution of the transportation problem by bringing their cars with them, and to notify the Chamber office in advance of their intention to do so.

The pilgrimage will start from Newton Corner and provisions are being made to have nearly a hundred cars on hand, all of which are expected to be well filled when the procession gets under way on August 26. All ticket holders will be asked to report on Richardson Street, Newton Corner, before 12.30 P. M., with the expectation that the start may be made very near that time. As the drivers of cars report to the transportation committee, they will be assigned to places in the line and decorations given out. The route will be through Newton Corner, Newtonville, and Newton Centre, to Beacon Street, and then to Nantasket, with dinner to be served at 2.30 o'clock.

The menu includes five courses and 14 items, with steamed clams, clam chowder, broiled live lobster, and broiled chicken, as the outstanding items. Special effort has been put forth to make sure that the dinner will be one of the very best, and no disappointment is anticipated in connection with this, the main feature of the varied program.

During and following the dinner, there will be music by an orchestra and a cabaret entertainment, to conclude before four o'clock. At that hour, the big baseball game will be staged, between carefully chosen teams representing Newton Corner and the other villages of the city. The field sports to follow will include a 100-yard dash, fat man's race, shoe race, bag race, pipe race, a nail driving contest, a three-legged race with teams competing from each of the villages of the city; and a tug of war. Plenty of desirable prizes will be provided for the winners in all of the events. The outing will be held rain or shine on Wednesday, August 26. In the event of rain, a substitute program of sports will be provided indoors, and other prearranged changes made to meet the situation. In any event, there will be no question regarding the assurance of a good time for every ticket holder, with ample variety and plenty of fun to hold the attention and maintain the enthusiasm of all until dark.

While the annual outing is planned and carried out under the direction of the Mercantile Division of the Chamber, a cordial invitation is extended to all members of the Civic Division, who care to attend. Members of the Chamber will also be privileged to bring guests if they care to do so. Newspaper publicity will be relied upon to make the event known to the general membership and a cordial invitation is extended at this time—and in this way—to all civic members to attend.

CITY HALL

From data relative to building construction in New England cities given in the monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, for August, we find that Newton stands sixth in a list of over over forty cities in the value of building permits issued for the first six months of 1925, and stands first in the value per capita, almost 100 per cent greater than the value per capita for the same period in 1924. In value of permits for 1925 Newton is only exceeded by Boston, Providence, Hartford, Springfield, and Worcester.

Among the new things laughter brought home from school is a new conception of bedtime.

Y. M. C. A.

Newton "Y" Junior Team entertained the St. Josephs of Roxbury here Friday. Newton again bowed to St. Josephs 3-1. The local boys put up a very good fight and most anything might have happened had the game not been called in the 5th on account of darkness. This was the second of the series with the Roxbury boys, the first being played at Roxbury July 30th. Newton lost 8-1.

Many changes are being made in the line-up with the expectation of making a real snappy outfit. It might be well to say that this is the first representative Junior Team Newton "Y" has had in the field for some fifteen years.

Newton "Y" Junior Team which is entered in the Boston Braves Knot Hole league, played the series of two out of three games with the Dorchester community "Y", Saturday and Tuesday evenings. Saturday's game was played at Franklin Field, Dorchester. Newton coming out on top 10-5. Tuesday's game was won by the locals 7-6 (5 innings). The Dorchester boys were rather young and many substitutions were necessary to make the game at all interesting. Winning of these games definitely enters the local boys in the league. Their next game will be played at the Newton "Y" field, August 22nd. The East Boston Boys Club will be the attraction.

Through the efforts and interest of Mr. C. D. Kepner, the Junior baseball team has been outfitted with uniforms. The boys appeared in their well earned uniforms against the Boyd A. A. last Thursday.

Wednesday, the local "Y" entertained the usual large fresh air group from Boston. The group numbered forty in all. East Boston 8, Roslindale 7, Chestnut 25.

Tuesday, the Dorchester community "Y" were invited to enjoy a swim in the "Y" tank. Fifty boys came all the way from Dorchester to enjoy this privilege. Dorchester has no building and is forced to do its work through the churches and community centers.

Last Friday the "Y" entertained the boys from Burr, Cabot, and Boyd playgrounds. Majority seemed like new faces which goes to show that it isn't the same group that is enjoying the privilege each time. So far, one hundred and fifty boys have been in the pool.

The Y. M. C. A. Senior ball team is having a very good season this year. To date their record stands 12 to the good, five losses, and two tie games. The team is captained by Louis Bills and managed by John S. Irving. The members of the team are:—Louis Bills, Capt., Bud Seavey, Beanie Barnes, Peg Wood, Mecca Adams, Cutie Cunningham, Phil Forsythe, Cole, Jim Thomson, Mike Gullian, Tom Sutcliffe, McCoy, and Pat Farley.

MAN HURT

Peter Baruchci, of Everett, is in the Newton Hospital with a bad scalp wound and possible concussion as the result of an argument Monday morning with a fellow-laborer on construction work, which ended when Baruchci was struck on the head with a piece of lead pipe.

The men were working on Crosby Road, Chestnut Hill. According to witnesses a third man, acting as peacemaker, separated the pair with a push. Baruchci fell to the ground, and before he could arise, the man he had been arguing with struck him on the head with the lead pipe.

Baruchci was taken to the hospital, where he is expected to recover.

Miss Annie Smith of Walnut street, Newtonville, sustained cuts about the body. Tony Farra of Revere received cuts about the right ear. Theresa Simatra of Revere was cut on the arms and hands and Peter Farra of Boston sustained cuts on the face and mouth.

One of the automobiles was owned and operated by Anthony Cartaldo of Revere and the other by Winfield Hiatt of Harvard street, Newtonville. Both cars, which came together head on, were badly damaged. The occupants were thrown out and cut by the flying glass and by the fall to the pavement.

Richard Thomas, 9, of 1173 Washington street, West Newton, sustained cuts on his left foot when he was struck by a Chevrolet truck, owned by C. A. Stimets, of Eden avenue, West Newton, and operated by George W. Comisky, of Washington street, West Newton. Thomas was riding his scooter on Eden avenue opposite the Eden avenue playground when Comisky came along. In order to avoid the lad Comisky turned to the right but the boy coasted into the left front wheel of the truck. Comisky took him to the office of Dr. Jack who removed him to the hospital for treatment.

Last Friday evening machines operated by Joseph J. Ryan of Waltham and Joseph P. Melody of Auburn street, Auburndale, were in collision at the corner of Grove and Auburn streets, Auburndale. Melody was leaving his garage on Auburn street to go up Grove street, which is about opposite, when Ryan who was coming toward him cut the corner. The cars came together head on and both were badly damaged. Ryan sustained cuts about the legs and arms. Helen Doyle and Louise Connerney, both of Waltham, who were riding with Ryan, also were cut about the legs and arms. All were treated by Dr. Doyle of Waltham.

You can say one thing for American jurisprudence. It makes rich dependants spend a lot of money.

One reason why men dislike a woman who feels superior is because the feeling is justified.

The side of the street railways was presented to the members of the Newton Rotary Club last Monday noon at the weekly luncheon held at the Woodland Golf Club, by President Pitt F. Drew of the M. & B. St. Rwy. Co.

Mr. Drew talked frankly of the financial difficulties of the Middlesex & Boston system and of the difficulties which prevented his company from giving the bus service on some of its lines which it desires to give, and which is even more desired by the traveling public and by residents along these lines.

Mr. Drew again expressed the conviction that the only manner in which the public could be served as it desires to be served, and the transportation needs of school children provided for, was through the subsidization plan recommended by the special administrative committee headed by Alderman Collins who, with Mayor Childs, assisted materially to an understanding of the true problem through the answering of various questions and corroborative amplification of the situation, as explained by Mr. Drew.

For sheer audacity the modern runner surpasses about every other law-breaker. Not so very many evenings ago we were one of a group of sojourners on a section of beach on Cape Cod. It is one of those charming strips of shore that is reached only by an extended walk over the sand dunes. Because of this fact not many are drawn to the spot. We suppose the average vacationist must have his seashore ornamented by a park system. Tramping through sand is too much exertion. To our mind it is most alluring. However, it was rum-running and not romance of which we started to write in this paragraph. Therefore, let us get back to that theme. It was night, about 9:45 to be exact. A full moon was scheduled to appear and would have done its part for numerous clouds. The tide was high. Through the dunes flows a salt-water creek with an outlet on the edge of the Atlantic ocean. This creek is easily navigated by a large motor boat. The group of summer folks stood gazing across the dunes when one of its members said, "See, they're flashing signals." "Who?" "Those men down there." "Sure enough! One—three—three!" "Run-runners," exclaimed two of the party. "Nonsense," said we, "they couldn't be seen." Then another said, "What can it be?" No answer for no one knew. It was just a riddle, a mystery that added a bit of creepiness and thrill to the evening. In a few moments the chug-chugging of a motor and the rumbling of a truck's wheels. "Let's see what they're doing," urged one of our crowd. "Maybe we'd better not," advised another. Silence. A few moments of patient waiting. The noise of the truck again and the lights of the truck lighting the shore road. It was off in the direction of the town. Everyone was puzzled. We confessed that we never for a moment thought a crime was being committed. It was like a scene in the "movies." All went back to camp still wondering. Next day at the village postoffice we encountered an official we had previously met in the course of newspaper work. After an exchange of greetings we said, "By the way, can you give us any explanation of something we saw on the beach last night?" Thereupon we told the story of the flashing signals and the big truck. "What you saw was run-runners," came the reply. "They're bold as brass and they're landing everywhere on the Cape. Six prohibition officers are trying to stop them and you see what a fine chance they have." We haven't yet recovered from the display of nerve on the part of these crooks. How do they dare?

WE CALL FOR AND DELIVER

only made everybody laugh. Beginning with the most feeble sort of humming he finally had men, women and children singing with the enthusiasm of professional songsters. We were rather disappointed when he announced that in the future printed programs would be used to spare the audience the annoyance of his announcements. To pass up that part of the program would to us seem to spoil the whole thing. It appeared so spontaneous as it was. Printed announcements would in our opinion take the edge off. We wanted action and we believe the rest of the crowd did. Why? Because they liked it. Our hats are off to every successful "community sing" leader.

It is with much regret that we are forced to say that riding of bicycles on the sidewalk is not confined to the thoughtless youth of Newton. We have evidence that it is "being done" about everywhere that bicycles are ridden. We even saw it in New York where the "madding throngs" are supposed to occupy every inch of sidewalk space. In our more recent wanderings we encountered the champion bicycle hog. He was a young man and his field of operation was the pier leading to the town landing at a seaside resort. This youth was riding along the pier. What if anybody had been in his path? Nothing for them to do but to jump overboard! Newton never produced such an indifferent individual as that. Wait! He didn't belong there. He was a Summer boarder. Perhaps he came from Newton and got his training. Yes, we think that is probably the answer.

Reference in this column last week to an order offered my Pres. White of the Board of Aldermen has inspired a reader, who signs himself, "Ward Seven" to write the following:

"Can it be that some members of our splendid Board of Aldermen are jealous of the authority vested in them as regards garage permits? If you should ask me I should unhesitatingly reply 'That is my suspicion.' I am not a wealthy man but I am fortunate enough to possess an automobile. I have had a sufficient balance in the bank to permit me to consider the building of a one-car garage. In fact I did build the said garage but the red-tape that I encountered made me think that I was an undesirable citizen. I don't know how many aldermen or city officials I had to see. In fact I saw so many and talked with so many that I became dizzy. I began to feel like a condemned criminal pleading for my life. At one time I felt that the city of Newton did not want to see me within its borders. And it was all about one teeny, weeny garage to which my neighbors offered no objection. How does it happen that business men can afford to give so much time to a single application when there are so many before them? It seems beyond belief. I sincerely hope that Alderman White's idea will be carried out. Not that it will do me any good but it will save a lot of other people from the humiliation I was forced to undergo."

Several have told us to get ready for a lively Mayoralty campaign in Newton in the coming fall. Ho hum! Pardon our yawning in public.)

WORLD COURT QUESTION BOX

1. What is the World Court?
The World Court is a group of eleven judges who hold a session in June of each year to hear and decide "international causes" i. e. questions upon which nations are failing to agree.

2. Are sessions of the Court held if there are no cases to be heard?
Yes. Just as our own Supreme Court held session for several years before any cases were brought before it. The moral value of regular sessions is very great. However the Court has not only had business at every regular session but has held three extraordinary sessions as well.

3. What is the difference between the World Court and the old Hague Tribunal of Arbitration?
One difference is indicated in the official title of the former—the Permanent Court of International Justice. The Hague Tribunal although its official title is the Permanent Court of Arbitral Justice is, as Elihu Root wittily remarked, neither permanent nor a court. It is a list of about 130 persons from which may be chosen arbitrators in any given case. Moreover it does not have regular sessions. In critical times the delay, amounting to several months in choosing arbitrators and otherwise arranging the machinery may be serious; the desired arbitrators may find it impossible to free themselves from other engagements; decisions by occasional arbitrators are less likely to result in building up a system of international law.

The World Court judges, having a regular salary, owe their first duty to the Court. Beside their regular June session they may whenever desirable be conveyed for a special session so that pressing business may be speedily dealt with. It will be remembered that in 1914 the need of machinery for dealing promptly with an emergency was bitterly felt. (Published at the request of the Newton League of Women Voters.)

WHERE ELKS STAND

The following words from the new Grand Exalted Ruler of the Order of Elks shows where Elks' stand on the red menace.

Every Elk must be not an intermittent foe, but a continuing gladiator. For if any band that would seek to play the "Internationale" in the United States of America. There is no place in any of the forty-eight rooms of this great national mansion for red except as one of the stripes in Old Glory. There must never come a moment of mistaken freedom when we may look on lethargically, while the orchestra, either on the soap box, or on the "pep" he said things about the red, or absence of little jokes at our government and gives utterance to expense. But they didn't hurt; they treason.

WHAT IS A HORSEMOBILE

If a crossword puzzle enthusiast were to ask anyone outside of New England the meaning of the word "Horsemobile", he would be answered with a vacant stare and a dubious shake of the head. For here is a word that cannot be found in the dictionary.

In New England, however, the reply would be prompt and conclusive. Any bright schoolboy would say that it is a synonym of a word of five letters, meaning a cool and satisfying drink. Frank Archer, of MOXIE, has originated a very ingenious advertising device which he calls the Horsemobile. It is one that always attracts attention and that never loses its novelty. In Boston and other leading cities of New England, this unique vehicle can be seen wending its way in and out of the crowded traffic. In almost every parade one may see it well in the van of the procession, as unfurling as the steam callopes of a circus.

This curious device consists of a completely equipped automobile chassis on which is erected a life-size statue of a horse. The driver or "rider" of this unusual vehicle sits on the back of the "horse" guiding it with a steering wheel. Shifting levers and brakes are conveniently located and function much like those on an ordinary automobile. It is a combination of the old and the new method of transportation—literally a horse on wheels which, by the way, is the true meaning of the word "horsemobile".

"YOUNG LORD JEFF" HERE

Viscount Jeffrey John Archer Amherst Holmesdale, familiarly known to all Amherst men as "Young Lord Jeff", will visit Boston this week. A luncheon in his honor will be held at the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday noon under the auspices of the Amherst Alumni Association of Boston. Viscount Holmesdale was given an honorary M. A. degree at the time of the Amherst College Centennial Celebration in 1921. He is the elder son and heir of the fourth Earl of Amherst and is a direct descendant of the famous Lord Jeffrey Amherst for whom the town and college were named. Holmesdale served as captain in the Cold Stream Guards for four years during the war.

He is now studying American investment business and is in the New York office of Harris, Forbes and Co. During his visit Viscount Holmesdale will be entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald D. McKay in Newton Highlands.

CHAMBER OUTING

Annual Outing of Newton Chamber of Commerce to be Held Wednesday at Nantasket

The stage is all set for the annual outing of the Newton Chamber of Commerce, to be held next Wednesday afternoon, August 26, at McPeake's Shore Gardens, Nantasket. Advance reports from members of the committee indicate an unprecedented sale of tickets, while the varied and interesting program, and many special features, promise to combine with an unusually large attendance to make this the most successful and most enjoyable outing ever held under Chamber auspices.

Not only will all villages and all sections of the city be represented, but the representations promise to be large in every instance if one may judge from the advance reports of those in charge of the distribution of tickets. All members of the Chamber, both of the business and civic divisions are cordially invited, and are privileged to bring guests if they desire to do so. Members of the committee are putting forth every effort to make the coming event one that will surpass anything of a similar nature ever held by the business men of Newton.

The many who have already purchased outing tickets—or those who are planning to do so—will do well to acquaint themselves with the following program while those who are not contemplating being "among those present" may perhaps find it sufficiently attractive to convince them that the big outing on next Wednesday, is going to be an event that they cannot afford to miss.

All ticket holders—or prospective ticket holders—are urged to report not later than 12.30 P. M., on next Wednesday, at either end of Richardson Street, at Newton Corner. Those having cars are invited to bring them and to assist in solving the problems of the transportation committee, while those not having cars will be provided with transportation upon reporting to the committee. Decorations will be provided for all cars. Representatives of the committee will be at either end of Richardson street, to intercept all arrivals.

The transportation committee is striving in every possible way to perfect their arrangements so as to insure getting the automobile parade under way at the advertised time, 12.30 o'clock. The route will be through Newton Corner, Newtonville, and Newton Centre, and thence down Beacon Street, for the journey to Nantasket. Dinner will be served at 2.30 o'clock, with steamed clams, broiled live lobster, broiled chicken, and a wide variety of "fixings." An orchestral and cabaret entertainment will be given during and immediately following the dinner. At four o'clock, the big baseball game will be called, with Newton Corner contending with an All-Newton team for diamond honors. Upon the conclusion of the game there will be a varied series of field sports some of which will demonstrate the athletic prowess of contestants, while others have been arranged in the spirit of fun and promise to contribute materially to the pleasure of both spectators and contestants. The list of events includes a 100 yard dash, fat man's race, shoe race, bag race, nail driving contest, pipe race, three-legged race, tug of war, and other events if time permits. Any or all of those present will be invited to participate in the various events.

A feature of this season's outing will be the unusually large and attractive array of prizes for all athletic events. The merchants of the city have been generous to the extreme in donating prizes, with assurance that more than fifty desirable prizes—ranging in value from a couple of dollars to ten dollars or more—will be available for distribution to the various winners. These include boxes of cigars, automobile accessories of all kinds, thermos bottles

ROTARY CLUB

Members of the Newton Rotary Club enjoyed an interesting address by Dr. J. E. Charlton of Montclair, New Jersey, at their weekly luncheon meeting on Monday, at the Woodland Golf Club, "International Good Will" was Dr. Charlton's subject in the presentation of which he experienced no difficulty in holding the close attention of his audience. This included several guests as well as a gratifying representation of the membership of the local club.

Dr. Charlton has been a traveler—and observer—in many lands, and displayed a capacity for analyzing foreign conditions in a way that provided ample food for serious thought on the part of his hearers. His predictions regarding the probable development of various foreign countries, in a political as well as an economic way, were exceptionally interesting. This especially applied to his consideration of present day conditions and tendencies in China, the speaker being one of the growing number who regard the so-called "Yellow Peril" with apprehension. He suggested the possibilities in the event that China—with its four hundred millions of people—should develop aspirations for greater recognition and influence among the nations of the world, and should seek to achieve these through a militaristic policy—a development almost unthought of at the present time but regarded by those who know as a strong possibility of the future.

The speaker urged his auditors to keep their eyes on China and enumerated many indications of the great awakening to come, as it is viewed by recent visitors to that country and students of present day conditions. This meeting marked the close of the second attendance contest of the local club, with the results to be announced on a later date.

plants made very attractive decorations. Mr. and Mrs. Baker will make their home after October 1st, at Buena Vista, Florida.

The bride made her debut as a concert singer last May in Boston.

10,000 MILES O'ER LAND AND SEA

A Trip Across the Continent and to Far Away Hawaii

I was honored by Governor Farrington with an invitation to tour the other islands of the group with a party of Congressmen who were also his guests.

The Navy department gave us the use of a destroyer, the Overton, a boat which I learned had been commanded during the war by Bruce R. Ware, Jr., formerly of Newton. The island of Hawaii, the largest in the group, is about 260 miles from Honolulu, and out ship made the trip in a little over seven hours. A destroyer is noted for its rolling motion, and with the fast time we were making, a head wind and one or two other little factors, it is hardly necessary to add that nearly every civilian in the party was sea sick.

Hilo, the largest town on Hawaii, is next to Honolulu in population. It is said to be the wettest town in the world, and we were told it had a rainfall of 365 to 420 inches annually, as compared with about 50 inches in this part of New England. The town looks damp and feels damp, although the vegetation is quite luxuriant. We spent the night at the Hilo hotel—quite a comfortable place and very well managed.

The next morning we drove around the town, in order that the governor might see some of the suggested improvements to the place. At one of the little fishing clubs where we stopped we saw fish eat bread and make a noise like a pig in so doing.
This was caused by the rush of the fish to eat the bread when thrown to them, part of the time their bodies being out of the water.

One of the sights of the island is a railway which skirts the shores for twenty miles or more. As the shores of the island are mostly high cliffs with here and there a gulch, where a brook or creek makes its way into the ocean, there is a beautiful view all the way, with spectacular trestles (one of which is 230 feet high), where the railroad crosses these valleys.

The next day we set out on an automobile drive around the island, part of the way covering the same ground as the railroad trip of the previous day. Everywhere there was growing cane in the fields, with hedges of lantanas and morning glories along the road. Nearly every homestead had its little grove of banana trees, some of them being 25 feet high. I was told that it takes eighteen months to grow bananas, and that the stalk dies after producing its fruit.

We passed thru several little villages, and I notice that all the postoffices had their private boxes on the outside of the building, so that people could get their mail at any hour of the day or night.

We visited several of the territorial schools, housed mostly in one-story wooden buildings.

Hawaii is the only island which produces coffee, and a mighty good of coffee we found it to be. It was so good I suggested that New England might be a good market for Kona coffee, and if it ever does come on the market here, I advise coffee lovers to try it.

Coffee is the third largest crop of the islands, and it grows on small trees about twenty feet high. It takes the trees from three to five years to mature, and five bags of green berries will make about one bag of dried coffee, worth about $3.50 a hundred pound bag.

The west side of the island is mostly used for ranching purposes, for horses and cattle.

That night we spent at a country hotel, where I was once more disillusioned, this time in regard to the warmth of the tropics. For I slept that night under two blankets and a quilt and was none too warm at that.

That evening I witnessed another unusual event in Nature, when my attention was called to a lunar rainbow, that is, a rainbow caused by the light of the moon. It was a perfect bow in shape but showed no colors, being a misty sort of white. It lasted but a few moments.

Our ride next day led us thru some most unusual country. At several places we passed thru forests of cocus plants or rather trees, for the trunks were from six to eight inches in diameter. It was the prickly pear variety, and there must have been thousands of them.

We also drove thru the remains of former lava flows from the active volcano, Mauna Loa, which had the most unheard of shape for an active volcano, being something of the whale-back formation, and over 13,000 feet high. Thirteen thousand feet high on the island of Hawaii means something, for you see this mountain from practically sea level and not, as in other mountains, from a high elevation.

Mauna Loa erupts also, something different from the average volcano, as its lava breaks out of the side rather than from the top of the mountain.
As a result the lava from each flow, runs in different directions, although most of the flows are towards the western side of the island. We passed thru several of these flows, and a more desolate and deserted country one never saw. The lava was a dirty black brown in color, and covered the land with winrows and heaps of all kinds of weird and fantastic forms.
Here a small irregular-shaped hill,
there a perfect cave and everywhere
the rough, dirty heaps of frozen rock.

One can imagine the terrific belly ache, Madame Pelee (the goddess of volcanoes) must have had to spew up such a mess as we saw that morning.

We reached the Volcano House that day in time for a trip across the crater to the active fire pit of Kilauea.
Here again, one's conception of a volcano is all twisted for Kilauea is not a mountain, at all. It is merely a crater on the side of Mauna Loa, and is a hole in the ground—a fire pit.

The Volcano House is built on the edge of the larger crater, and is some two miles distant from the volcano itself. The path drops down some five hundred feet from the hotel to the crater floor, and then meanders over the dead lava formations of previous eruptions for about two miles. This lava is different from that on the western side of the island, being more like cold tar in appearance, although it is cracked and seamed. Heat can be felt by placing your hand into one of these cracks, and the nearer you get to the fire pit, the more heat is felt, and considerable white steam arises from all sides. The volcano was not active when we were there, and we merely saw a deep hole in the ground, with a little steam arising from the gravelly bottom. All around us were small stones, some as large as your head, which had been thrown out of the pit in previous eruptions, and there was one large boulder said to weigh 14 tons, fairly near the edge of the pit. This region is a national park, and the superintendent told us some hair-raising escapes he had had in the eruption of May, 1924.

After the long walk across the lava
we were glad enough to have automobiles waiting for us for the rest of the trip. We were shown some luxuriant tree ferns, over 25 feet in height and one stretch of the road ran between a forest of large and beautiful ferns. Several old craters, grass grown, were exhibited, in one of which the Superintendent threw his hat well over the edge, only to have it swept back to him by the air rising from the crater.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was a walk thru a lava tube or tunnel. This was caused by a heavy flow of lava on a fairly steep grade which kept up so long as to allow the top of the flow to cool, the more liquid lava continuing to flow, and when it ceased leaving a tunnel, some 10 or 12 feet in diameter. This tunnel is traversable for a distance of several hundred feet, and it is said to be over 1500 feet in total length.

The Volcano House is a splendidly kept hotel, and every comfort is provided even to hot water bottles to heat the bed at night, for its elevation is over 4000 feet, and it is rather cold after the sun goes down, even in the tropics.

Returning to Hilo, we once more braved the discomforts of sea sickness by taking another destroyer for a trip to the island of Maui, but were assured by the officers that as the trip back would be "down hill" there was less danger of mal de mer. Just how it was possible for the water in the Pacific Ocean to run "down hill" was unsuccessfully explained to me several times, and I am still ignorant of just what that phrase means. However, we escaped seasickness that time as the trip was a short one, and the sea was comparatively smooth.

We have heard considerable in this part of the country of Honolulu, Waikiki Beach, and the volcano Kileua, but I venture to say that very few persons have ever heard of the island of Maui. I have found in the course of considerable travel about this country that it is usually some unknown feature of the scenery, rather than the better advertised features, that have proved the most interesting.

I think this is also true of the island of Maui. On arrival there most of my companions accepted an invitation to make a night's stay on the mountain of Haleakala. "The House of the Sun" and said to be the largest dormant volcano in the world. I was too tired to undertake that journey and while I missed a wonderful experience, I had a much needed rest.
I was told that the party, after driving some 20 miles in an automobile (being delayed somewhat by a bad tire), started on a horseback trip to the summit, at 9:30 in the evening. While there were expressions about the wonderful moonlight, I drew my own conclusions that when they arrived at the rest house at the top of the mountain at 1:30 A. M., they were more interested in bed than in midnight scenery. However, they did say that the view of the sun rising below the clouds was an interesting sight and well worth the trip. Haleakala is 10,- 000 feet high and its crater contains 19 square miles, being over 7 miles in length and over two miles in width.

We were entertained that day at luncheon by one of the wealthy residents of the islands who had a fine residence on the shore a few miles from town. The decorations of the luncheon table were as beautiful as I have ever seen, and yet as most simple as could be imagined. Two tall slender silver vases, gifts of a recent silver wedding, were on the table, one at each end and containing some of the largest orange colored hibiscus I had ever seen. The flowers were wired to slender bamboo stalks to give a graceful angle, giving the effect of an umbrella of flowers. One of the blossoms measured over seven inches in diameter.

The island of Maui is shaped something like the head and shoulders of a man, the larger part containing the volcano and the cultivated portion.

and the head part of a wild and weird collection of mountains. This part of the island contains the Iao valley, said to be the Yosemite of Hawaii, and it fully deserves that designation. The trip is about two miles in length, and one is impressed with the steepness of the mountains on either side. You follow a little stream up the valley, with interesting views on either side, and all at once you come in sight of the Needle, as unique a formation as you will ever see, for it is a single up-ended piece of solid rock, 1200 feet high above the floor of the valley, shaped like a hound's tooth.

Where the valley narrows on the approach, near the bridge, is the famous spot called "Kapanui", where Maui men lost in their struggle with Kamehameha—their dead bodies piled high, the waters of the stream were dammed, as the Hawaiian name of the locality signifies. Later, when the dam burst and their bodies were carried to the sea, the water was filled with blood, and hence Iao, or "bloody," was the name given to this valley and to the river.

While we had been in Hawaii, the fleet had left Honolulu and gone to Lahaina roads, just off the shores of Maui, and our instructions were to take another destroyer that night for the return trip to Honolulu. The ride from Waikuku, the county seat of Maui to Lahaina, was a scenic delight.
The road was built at several hundred feet elevation from the sea, and skirted the coast for ten miles or more.
In many respects it reminded me of the Storm King Highway near West Point, but it was much longer. As we approached Lahaina the fleet lying at anchor became visible in the forenoon sun, and made a most beautiful sight.
We drove part way up the mountain side above the town just to get a better view of the town, the water and the fleet, gathered together for the first time in the entire trip. That evening we had an opportunity to see the fleet lighted for the night, and it made a fascinating sight.

That Maui is a fruitful island can be gathered from the statement that it produces three pounds of sugar and one case of pineapples for every man, woman and child in the United States.
The Punne sugar mill is the largest in the world, and its plantation contain over 20,000 acres.

Our trip to Honolulu was made without special incident, arriving in that city about midnight.

and thermal jars, articles of furniture and for home decoration, motor oil, canned goods, groceries, confectionery, mens clothing, in fact one or more articles from every line of mercantile business in the city.

The outing will be held, rain or shine. In the event of rain, a substitute program of indoor sports will be provided. Those who have not yet secured tickets are urged to do so as early as possible, that the committee may better plan for ample accommodations. The tickets—which are $4.00 each—may be secured from members of the committee, at any of the stores and other locations listed last week in the local papers, or may be secured by getting in touch with the Chamber office. Because of the necessity of notifying the Shore Gardens management in advance of the number of diners desired, only a few tickets can be sold as late as next Wednesday. All tickets should be secured in advance of that date. The co-operation of every member of the Chamber is solicited in creating interest in the event and in making it one that will establish new outing standards in the annals of Newton business men and the Newton Chamber of Commerce.

A DELIGHTFUL DAY'S OUTING

One of the most interesting and enjoyable of the many excursion trips around Boston is the one to Gloucester, on the steamers of the Boston and Gloucester Steamboat Company. Leaving the pier at the foot of State Street at 10:30 A. M., one soon forgets the heat of the city, and is refreshed by the cool air of the sea. The trip down the harbor is replete with interesting sights. Passing Castle Island on the right Fort Warren, Spectacle Island, Long Island, Fort Winthrop, Nix's Mate, Deer Island, Boston Light and Minot's Light are among the many points of historic and noteworthy significance.

The steamer sails along the North Shore past Nahant, Lynn, Salem and the many attractive estates at Manchester-by-the-Sea, Beverly, and Hamilton, arriving at Gloucester at one o'clock. At Gloucester, one has ample time to visit this quaint and historic city. If one desires there are busses which can be taken to any one of numerous places in the vicinity. Long Beach and Annisquam are two of the most popular of these. A shore dinner is also another popular attraction for visitors.

Leaving the Gloucester pier at 4:30, the trip back to Boston is enjoyed by all. Docking at about seven o'clock, one cannot help but feel refreshed and invigorated by the hours of cool and fresh sea air.

NEWTON BETTER HOMES

Israel Nesson & Sons are just completing a group of superior single residences and two family houses on Commonwealth Avenue, between Beaumont and Lowell Avenues, and on Lowell Avenue, Newtonville. A departure has been made from the usual type of houses built to sell. These builders have been accustomed to build houses to keep for permanent investment and do therefore use material and labor of the best quality. They have utilized all the modern conveniences and innovations aimed to appeal to discriminating home buyers such as tiled roofs, tiled bathrooms and kitchens, tiled outside porches and terraces, ample plumbing (brass), solid porcelain tubs, parquet floors, quartered gumwood dining room dados. Wall paper has been eliminated. The walls have been uniquely decorated with craftex, panelling and tiling.

Other details include linen and cedar closets, mirrored doors hot water heat and instantaneous hot water heaters, fireproof heated and lighted garages and many other details. It can only be appreciated by a thorough inspection.

The schedule of prices is exceedingly low compared to the quality of the houses.

You are cordially invited to inspect these houses which are under the name of Newton Better Homes.

Caretaker on premises daily and Sunday.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S ANCESTORS

Coolidge and Dawes, Partners, 1776

Isn't that an exciting headline? A New York reporter thought it so, when he made the thrilling discovery about a year ago that there was in the City of Worcester in the year 1776 a grocery firm of Coolidge and Dawes, and trust the nimble wits of one whose dramatic instinct for news is highly developed to make the most of the discovery. Huge headlines announced at that time that the President's ancestor and the Vice-President's were partners in business in those days—even as in our own—and that they were related by marriage. What a shame to spoil such a romantic story! But a Boston Editor, knowing of my business as official genealogist of the family, immediately called me on the telephone and asked concerning the truth of this news. And, alas, another bubble burst!

For while it is true that the Dawes of the partnership is William Dawes, Jr., and the ancestor to the Vice-President, the Coolidge of the grocery firm is not the President's forebear, but a John Coolidge of Boston, and scion of a branch as far removed from relationship to the President's branch as it is possible by time in this country. The Boston branch descends from Jonathan, youngest son of the original settlers, and the President's so far as we know, descends from an older brother Simon, so that the two lines branch from the second generation in this country, a matter of nearly three hundred years, and of many generations.

From this Boston branch was descended the Joseph Coolidge who married Eleonora Wayles Randolph, granddaughter of President Thomas Jefferson, and a descendant of theirs was Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, distinguished as Ambassador to France. It is amusing, therefore, knowing the facts of how remote is relationship here, to read such headlines as: "President Coolidge Linked by Ties of Kinship to Thomas Jefferson," but such statements catch the eye of readers and make excellent copy, even though based upon the news instinct of news reporters only!

Another interesting marriage in this branch of the family is that of the son Benjamin to Mary Carter Brewster, a descendant of Elder William Brewster of the Plymouth Colony.

Other families related by marriage in this line are the Templemans of Washington, D. C., the Saltontails, the Sears, and the Bullfinches.

In other branches of the family there are equally distinguished connections—with the Hoars, whose United States Senator was as proud of his Coolidge blood, as was our own Chaplain Edmund Dowse of Sherborn, beloved of the State Senate for over twenty-five years, and pastor of the Pilgrim Church of Sherborn for sixty-seven years. Descendants of the Bond who wrote the history of Watertown married various Coolidge girls from the first settlement of that town. Russells, and Danas, with their governors and educators, are allied with the family, as well as some distinguished southern families, of equal standing to the Randolphs and Jeffersons, but somewhat less advertised by the branches who, nevertheless, are aware of and proud of their affiliations.

Thinking of those Minute Men who came from all parts of the State in answer to the summons of blazing fires upon hill-tops, lighted immediately that the word of Paul Revere and of William Dawes, Jr., fell upon listening ears of waiting patriots, there is one arresting circumstance—more than coincidence, surely—a law of destiny. The man who set forth so bravely to pit his wits against the shrewd British, in an attempt to warn my ancestor and the ancestor of Calvin Coolidge—and of many other loyal colonists—of the danger to their precious stores of ammunition, and of many other even more precious things, was the ancestor of Gen. Dawes, the partner today of Calvin Coolidge, in the great business of the United States of America! Dry lines of history? The wonder and miracle of it is more fascinating than fiction!

Another bit of coincidence that is equally fascinating is that a William Dawes—a near relative of the rider to Lexington, whose great-uncle married a Sarah Story—was a flier on that march of the Roxbury Minute Men, after William Dawes' warning was blazoned on the midnight sky. So that while one William rode on his daring mission, his cousin William merely flier—when he dared—to keep up the spirits of his little marching band of patriots!

And these two were not the only men of the Dawes name who served in the Revolution, and even at Lexington and Concord. William the flier's brother Jonathan was in the same regiment, and went to Lexington. A Thomas Dawes of Duxbury answered this same midnight summons, and even a Robert Dawes from far-away Bridgewater is listed as being on the April 19th alarm!

We find an Edward Dawes serving as a guard of Boston in 1777, and a William Dawes of Boston—probably the Roxbury man—commissioned, fighting at Dorchester Heights in 1777, and one of those who hastened to Bennington, when the furious warfare was transferred to that point.

William Dawes, Jr., not only enlisted in the Continental Army—in spite of statements that there is no evidence that he did so, on the part of certain historians—but received a commission as second Major in Col. Henry Bromley's Regiment on September 7, 1776.

Later, at the time that he was at Worcester with the Boston John Coolidge in the grocery business, he was appointed Assistant Commissary of Issues, in charge of provisions and rations. There is a story that as such he played a trick upon certain enemy Hessians, in tampering with the weights while selling them provisions. Sad as it may sound to say that he was guilty of any such trickery, we must remember that all is fair in love and war, and this was war! Besides there were then no inspectors of weights and measures!

Of course we know of the attempts to take from William Dawes, Jr., the credit of the ride with Paul Revere, and there have been most peculiar statements that he did not serve in the Continental Army, but I can find no basis for such doubtings. William Dawes' cousin Thomas was commissioned a Lieutenant-Colonel in Henry Bromley's Boston Regiment on the same day that a William Dawes was commissioned a second Major—September 7, 1776—and this is the same regiment in which we find John Coolidge of Boston enlisted—the man with whom our William Dawes was in partnership in Worcester, and the warm friend and comrade who had married William Dawes' sister Lydia in 1772.

It certainly seems sound reasoning to suppose that this William Dawes is, therefore, the one who lived in Boston, and not the Brookline or Roxbury man.

The Thomas Dawes mentioned above was one of the illustrious men of those early Boston days. His skill as an architect is attested in various buildings of the day, including the old State House, and the old Brattle Street Church, of which latter he held the pulpit stone June 23, 1772, and did half the masonwork. He also helped build the Eustis Mansion for Governor Shirley. We can see that his patriotic work must have seriously interfered with his vocation, and after having incurred the British wrath by secret caucuses held in the garret of his Purchase Street was seized by the troops, he threw himself heart and soul into the Continental Army. His home being next door to Samuel Adams, and his fine abilities being counted upon, he was the intimate friend of Hancock, Deacon, Moderator, Director of Mass. National Bank, Representative, Senator, Councillor, three times Elector of the President of the United States. It is apparent he led a varied, useful and exciting life!

A fact concerning him of even more interest to myself is that on several of the pieces of State Script, carried by my great-grandfather, and which has descended to us, there appears the signature in his own handwriting, the signature of the Committee of Safety he was authorized to sign this script, although on the other pieces quite other names appear.

We are told that the son of this man, also a Thomas, sat on the Massachusetts Supreme Bench in 1792 to 1802, and that while he was a small man he was very eloquent. A family trait? Possibly! There is now addressing from the platform—or presiding over—another supreme body of our government a man of this name who, while not small of stature, the Senate has already found, to their disturbance, very eloquent!

And the amusing thing to be found in this discovery of the early history of the Dawes family of Boston is that when the Republican Convention nominated Gen. Dawes in June 1924 to be Calvin Coolidge's running-mate, it was the general belief that this selection followed the unwritten law that Illinois or Ohio, or New York or "SST" be represented upon any well-regulated Republican National Ticket for first honors! A clever wit has said that only a certain number of boys in this country have a chance to become its President, and the wise ones accordingly choose their residence in the three above named States. Yet the convention could not have chosen a man more endowed with New England character, and from his traits of character and achievements of career more molded after the early training of Massachusetts Bay State than is the man who is today our Vice-President.

The Evening Globe of November 6th last, informed its readers that the reason General Dawes consented to become a candidate for this office was because, when his name was mentioned for the nomination, there came stubborn opposition from certain sources, and instantly the idea of a fight appealed to him. In looking over records from the past I do not find this strange, for from the first his forebears have been of fighting. Of God-fearing, stock, and Henry Holland tells us that William Dawes, who subjected the British troops to annoyances when first they entered Boston, was not a man to submit tamely to their insults. The very Coat-of-Arms of the Dawes family bears out their reputation as courageous, and as defenders of their rights and self respect. It is even significant of interpretation to us of this day who have cause to know not only past representatives of this family but the man who stands at their head at this time. There is as books of Heraldry would express it, "argent on a band azure, cottised gules, three swans, or, between six battle axes." Battle axes, indeed! I should say so, from the time when William, Jr., nearly drove the British distracted in 1775, to our own General Dawes who has dared—

COOLIDGE'S ANCESTORS

more than once—to tell our sleepy Senate their duty and their obligations! Incidentally—although they love to lay every foolish remark to a woman, and the reason for it, I verily believe is because women so rarely say foolish things, in comparison to the frequency with which men do, that men have to try some way to even things up—a Democratic convention delegate of the feminine persuasion complimented the Republican delegates for having nominated a woman for the vice-presidency and when asked in some amazement what she meant, replied: "Why, that Helen Maria Daves!"

To return to the Dawes coat-of-arms, what of the "cottised gules," or swans? And what—next to doves—more peaceable than swans? General Daves has recently given to a tired world a wonderful plan for reparations that would bring about world understanding, world peace. I prefer to believe in the destiny of that coat-of-arms as having doves of peace, the harbinger, nay, rather, the goal toward which those battle axes have been ringing down the centuries!

The first William Daves to come to this country, strangely, did not come by main, but after landing in Salem in 1628, returned to England. It was his son William, born in Suffolk County, England, in 1620, who came to the new western world in the "Planter," in 1635 and settled in Braintree. He removed to Boston in 1652, and his home on Sudbury Street was one of the old substantial homesteads. His great-grandson, also a William, owned a home on Ann Street, and here were enacted many thrilling scenes during pre-revolutionary days, for he was an ardent patriot, in spite of the club foot which prevented his active participation in the war. We hear of him and his son William—the rider—as returning from the joyful enterprise of dumping tea into Boston Harbor—along with Samuel Coolidge of Natick and Joseph John who married Lydia Daves—I do love these coincidences and the constant rubbing up against each other of our two peppy families!—and—has had happened many another night when these two staunch patriots had been out till all hours mixing up in dangerous matters of great import to the colonies—they found feverishly, anxiously awaiting them, Daves' sisters, who promptly snatched their tell-tale broad-brim hats, upon which lay rows of tea, and vigorously shook them over the open fire, so speedily destroying the evidence of their nightly errand. This they did before they allowed a word to be told them of the destruction of the tea, so fearful were they of their beloved father and brother having been followed by British informers.

The picture is not complete of those days around Boston without Dr. Joseph Warren, warm friend of the Daweses and Coolidges. And this particular picture of John Coolidge and Lydia Daves and her brother the famous William Daves, Jr., is one of the finest of those rare paintings of colonial days. Dr. Warren had been doing some magnificent service for the patriots during the eleven years between the French and Indian Wars and the opening of the War of Independence. He had gained the admiration and confidence of such leaders as Hancock, Samuel and John Adams, James Otis, and Josiah Quincy, especially by his fiery speeches that still seem to ring out from the balcony of the Old South Church when one enters there! In fact, having been made Chairman of the Committee of Safety he ranked among those leaders and was one of them.

Such a leader requires trusty workers in his cause, and he found one at hand, courageous, resourceful, and dependable—none other than the man who was destined to become the ancestor of our Vice-President of 1925, that Dr. Warren employed William Daves, Jr., of Boston for many a secret mission and quiet espionage is proven in the story of the Daves Family by Henry Holland. That he was the more willing to take to his confidence young John Coolidge after he had married lovely Lydia Daves, William's sister, a man he had loved for his own sake and for his honored father's, but whom he now doubly loved for having won the affections of the maid he had always so admired, does not need proof.

These two men, therefore, served him as aids, but not as a staff officially. And it stands to reason that Warren did not find it necessary to seek some William Daves of Brookline, or some Ebenezer Daves of Roxbury, or some unknown John Coolidge outside of Boston to serve him.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY CLUB

The O'Reilly Club of Newton, held one of the most enthusiastic meetings last Wednesday evening, and the record for attendance equaled anything in the club's history, since its organization over thirty years ago.

Boston, Roxbury, Waltham, Watertown and other places sent representations, and each and every one did his part to present an interesting as well as instructive program.

President O'Connell presided and after greeting the large gathering gave a detailed account of last convention saying, it was largest and best he ever attended delegates being present from every state in the Union.

At the close of his address he was given a vote of thanks by the members and called in Thomas Delaney to take charge of the proceedings.

Brother Delaney wasted no words in presenting as his first speaker, Peter Conroy of Roxbury, who made a telling speech about the work of the order, and urged all the members to keep it up, and he also paid a tribute to President O'Connell and the Newton club for its fine showing.

P. J. Pendergast of Boston, caught the good will of his hearers, and was obliged to respond to an encore which he did by reciting one of Carltons poems.

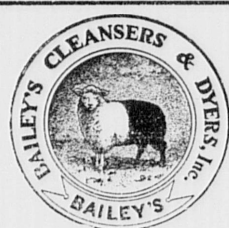

"Squire" McGaffigan who is always a welcome visitor made a brief address, but one full of pointed remarks. Brother Rowan of Weymouth, was also given a warm welcome and earned it, by a patriotic speech.

Other speakers made interesting remarks among them being, J. J. Herlihy, E. J. Burke, Richard Lyons and J. D. Monahan.

Before the meeting closed chairman Delaney called on M. J. Cunniff of Watertown, sponsor for the club name, the John Boyle O'Reilly Club, to pronounce the benediction.

Brother Cunniff gave a history of the club and paid a glowing tribute to O'Reilly's name, calling attention to the fact that thirty-five years ago the poet writer had passed away.

He urged those present to always keep in mind the welfare of the United States, and be loyal to those principals that animated its founders to make it the earth's best and strongest government.

Leverett D. G. Bentley

How does it happen that a person who has an excellent reputation for answering letters when at home becomes so forgetful of his correspondence during vacation? We have seen individuals, who during their regular duties at other times never allow a letter to remain unanswered for more than a few days, shy at the sight of stationery and even postage stamps when "taking it easy" at a Summer resort. And yet these same people are always interested in every visit to the country postoffice. "Be sure and see if there is a letter for me," they will call when someone announces they are "going for the mail." And to receive a letter is something everybody likes to do, especially while the holiday spirit is on. But to answer them! Ah, that's different! Days and days will pass before they decide to drop a line back home telling of their safe arrival. Haven't you witnessed the struggle that follows the declaration, "Oh, I must get that letter off today." It usually involves a search for some suitable writing material. Then the next thing is to find a spot where there is sufficient quiet, having begged of writers' corners. It takes a long time to get started and by the time the hand is willing the imagination runs dry. The letter thereupon becomes brief. Something is said about the weather. Then comes a reference to the kind of table that is offered by the host. Next a line or two about the cool evenings and the necessity for blankets. A pitying word is added at this point such as, "Sorry you are having such hot weather back home." The state of health of each member of the party is described briefly but adequately, references are made to society of news and then, "The others are waiting for me to finish this so I will close." And the painful operation is complete.

Increased cost by 100 per cent of the required amount of postage on souvenir postcards is said to have put a large crimp in the business of those who provide the supply. It seems hardly reasonable that one cent should make such a difference and yet we have the word of those who should know and whose veracity cannot be questioned. We used to receive every summer from an office associate a postcard showing the little church in a small town in New Hampshire. After the fifth had arrived we sat down and wrote to him, saying, "Haven't they run out of the church postcards yet or are there no others in that burg?" His reply was prompt and sharp. He set about to collect all the postcards in that vicinity so that before he had returned we had accumulated a complete collection of the postcards of that section of the Granite state. We are inclined to think that the taste in souvenir cards has changed. There was a time when the local photographer produced a worth while postcard that meant something. Then came the call for a less expensive one and these were turned out in a quantity at the village store. The liberal use of colored inks gave them landscapes the greenest grass and the pinkest sunsets. Then, too, every possible subject was "pictured"—so well, in fact, that one could scarcely recognize it. And after all the public buildings, churches, parks, playgrounds, public squares, wooded lanes and historic mansions had become matters of illustration little was left. May it not be that the tourist's appetite for postcards is not as keen. And further, may it be that automobilists are too busy with the care of their cars and other details of the trip to find opportunity to dash off a message on one of these souvenirs. We are sorry that the printers of these cards are not doing the business they did as we enjoy the prosperity of others as well as our own. But we think there may be some other reason than the increase in postal rates.

Constantly we hear or read of some new labor-saving device. There is available about every possible kind of contrivance for those domestic scientists who prepare the food, "do" the washing and cleaning and generally care for the household. That is quite as it should be and all should be grateful because of these inventions and for the privilege of living in this advanced age. There is one, however, that does not meet our approval. It has not to do with the home and therefore is not indispensable. We refer to the use of the automobile horn to produce applause. We happened to have witnessed a number of baseball games at Summer places this year and encountered the same experience as have many if not all of our readers. If the sympathizers with the home team wished to applaud some particularly clever play they did not clap their hands or shout but honked the auto horn. Commendable, yes; but as easy a way to register approval as can be imagined. The only effort required is a slight pressure on the button certain to produce a deafening noise no blistered palms or sore throats to prove loyalty. An audience of automobilists can make more racket than any other known gathering of enthusiasts. Would they be so eager if more effort were required. The result at present is about as large an amount of disturbance with as little effort as is offered by any device in existence. We would not shut off those who applaud with auto horns if they derive pleasure in this way. We were not surprised to read that it was thought inappropriate to express appreciation of the carillon at Colossset by sounding horns on motor cars. Still there are places where such a din is not out of place. Privately, we try to avoid the racket. It isn't always possible, however, and all we would ask is that the Applauder's Union get together and delegate one man to do the work for the others. This would also prevent one of the union's pet objections—overproduction.

Report has it that a harmonica craze is sweeping over the country. About the time we gleaned that interesting bit of musical gossip we happened to drop into a store where harmonicas may be bought. It was a source of considerable amusement to us to find so great a variety of these mouth-organs, as they used to be called. Now the musically inclined youth may equip himself with a harmonica of most any kind and at most any price. There is everything from the width of one's fist to the jumbo size. This latter is larger than an ordinary ear of corn and, according to our snap judgement, must be almost as difficult to manage in relation to one's mouth. We believe that the harmonica is a man's own. That is, we never have seen a woman or even a little girl, playing one. If there are on record cases where members of the fair sex displayed talent on this instrument we would be pleased to hear or read of them. In our opinion, it takes a man to get music out of a harmonica as one must develop the size of one's mouth and this few women are willing to do. And we don't blame them. For our own part we owned several harmonicas, from time to time, in boyhood days. But never were we able to play any great variety of tunes on them. As we recall our repertoire was exceedingly limited and whenever we attempted to render a selection the struggle was so great that the artistic effect was completely lost and our audience melted away before the entire piece had been played. Yet we used to enjoy listening to a good harmonica solo not our own. For that matter we would ask for nothing better now than the privilege of attending a harmonica concert. We have heard fellows who were wizards with these instruments. Often they would be standing on a street corner, surrounded by a group of admirers. A real expert, judged by our boyish standards, was the chap who could play the harmonica and shuffle his feet at the same time. When we say "shuffle" we mean perform a clever dance step. Yes, siree, that was art!

We became so interested—this was last week—that we made inquiries about the demand for harmonicas. "It goes by spells," we were told. "Sometimes there is a rush for them."

"Any particular time of year?" we asked.

"Yes, Fall and Winter—but Winter more than Fall."

Thereupon there came to mind memories of harmonica-players, with skull-caps pulled down over their ears to keep out the frosty air. They flourished, did these resourceful youngsters, because they were always certain of an audience and an appreciative one.

While the strains of harmonica music are haunting our memory, wonder, too, what has become of the jewsharp? Is it that we are no longer in the "kid" class and don't know what is going on, or has the jewsharp passed completely out of the picture? If the latter be true it seems to us a pity, for the jewsharp had a melody all its own and although faint, as compared with the harmonica, it was worth listening to. As we recall the same fellows could play the jewsharp and harmonica, although the harmonica was the more difficult of manipulation. Or was it the other way round? In any event it took skill to play either one or both. And to our mind music produced through human endeavor, even by harmonica and jewsharp players, is much more satisfactory than any "canned" stuff whether it come through a disc record or a loud speaker.

Editor of Newton Graphic
My dear Sir:
Thinking it may be helpful to the people of Eliot Church who are seeking a new pastor, I lend you these verses which I recently clipped from The Boston Evening Transcript.

Very truly yours,
A member of Eliot Church.

Perhaps you'd like to know
That many moons ago
A meeting of the Church was called to see

If they could strike a plan
To call some type of man
On whom the Church could happily agree

"The man I think to call
Should not be short or tall
And be single," said Miss Ella May De Brown.

Another lady said:
"Of course he must be wed;
But no children should he have to rove the town."

Up, a Deacon stern, arose, Wiped his glasses and his nose—
Said: "The man to guide our congregation here,
Must be dignified and soulful,
A student yet not doleful,
No joker, but attractive; full of cheer."

"Denominations not of ours,"
Said Mr. Samuel Powers,
"He must not countenance, yet friendly be."

"He must be a real good mixer,
A spiritualistic fixer;
Also noted for his popularity."

Quoth an influential surgeon
"We need another Spurgeon,
One who makes our hearts to nobler deeds aspire."

"Yet not be too emphatic Or overly dramatic;
Of that we all would very quickly tire."

"We want a man that's sprightly,
Young, experienced and slightly;
Not too handsome, for a scandal might arise,

"Love children—have no babies,
Be attractive to the ladies,
In short, be flawless in our churchly eyes."

Up rose an old man fearful,
With eyes grown dim and tearful:
"For perfection, what amount shall we now pay?"

The Treasurer said quite tartly,
In a voice that rang out smartly:
"Why, nine hundred per is plenty,
I should say."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Swampscott, Mass., August 19.—In visiting the summer capital here, it is natural that observers first make a contrast between Swampscott and Washington. The scene at the White Court differs but little from the life at the executive Mansion. The scenic investiture, particularly the ocean vista, is the only reminder that the President is vacationing.

Though the number of visitors is necessarily restricted, there is a certain hustle and bustle which emphasizes the fact that the Nation cannot be without an Executive. The atmosphere of officialdom may be missing from men in other walks of life but this restful informality is denied the President.

Washington is exceedingly dull during the August "dog days". There is no appreciable reduction in the volume of official mail. While Rudolph Forester, efficient and quiet executive clerk attempts to separate the wheat from the chaff at Washington, a large portion of the correspondence is forwarded to Lynn, where the executive offices have been temporarily installed. Secretaries and couriers motor to and from White Court. The wheels of Government never halt. Problems of magnitude are always cropping up.

The exigencies of politics bring numerous notables to the summer capital.
Members of the Senate and House, having sharp contests in their own states, feel it desirable to talk things over with President Coolidge.

Notwithstanding the fact that the President rarely comments on situations outlined by legislators and political leaders, it does not prevent the latter from giving their views. Perhaps the mere act of baring their ambitions to a quiet understanding man is in itself a form of mental relief.

Whenever possible legislators have photographs taken with Mr. Coolidge, the theory being that their constituents will be impressed with visible evidence that their representatives are on a social and political footing.

More than one legislator owes his place to the gullibility of the average voter who is content with seemingly undisputable proof of "being close to Coolidge". Circumstantial evidence of photographs is a great force for good or harm, according to the viewpoint.

The change has benefited the President. He has gained in weight, seems more buoyant and is slightly tanned.
The sea breezes have contributed greatly.

Mr. Coolidge is a delightful host and does his best to make one feel that he is visiting a home along the seashore and not an official residence.
In keeping with the simple tastes of the distinguished occupants there is a noteworthy absence of frills, which mark the summer homes of the social climbers and near great.

The President delights to read, and occasionally saunters about the spacious grounds. Never having acquired a hankering for popular sports in his busy youth, Mr. Coolidge finds little interest in these diversions now when his slightest wish could be realized.
Mrs. Coolidge, however, frequents the private bathing beach and takes long hikes around the countryside.

The Coolidges have been a disappointment to those who expected a gay social summer. They are of vacation and that means rest from society.

Mr. Coolidge seated on the front porch at White Court, facing the sea, entertains his guests like any other host. His anecdotes of local life show that he is a keen observer of human nature.

Of necessity he must consider coal strikes, cabinet changes, tax reduction, political squabbles, patronage, and must endure an avalanche of suggestions. But, the President is enjoying himself, he will tell you so, and no better authority is required.

pital on July 1, has established himself in Rockport, Maine, with an office at 66 Central street.

Miss Frances Bailey, the hospital laboratory technician, who went on a trip to California, has sent word that she has decided not to return to the east.

WORLD COURT QUESTION BOX, No. 2.

Q. How is a case brought before the World Court?

A. By the nations concerned. Suppose for example that England and Germany have a difference. Germany is not a member of the Court but that does not matter. The Court is open to all nations. England and Germany, then, present their case to the Court asking from it an investigation of the whole matter and agreeing to abide by its judgment. Each through its lawyers presents its side of the question; the Court considers all pertinent facts and arguments and when a majority of its members agree, their decision is made public.

There is no code of international law to guide the judges in their deliberations. Such codes have at various times been drawn up by scholars but none has met with general acceptance because of the wide differences in the point of view of different nations. There are however treaties and international agreements as law which are recognized by all civilized peoples as just and reasonable. By the study of these as well as of the question at issue it has been possible thus far to render decisions which have been accepted by both parties even when one, as must always be the case has been more or less disappointed. It is in this way, that is by the decision of special cases that the great body of common law, as distinguished from statute law, has grown up. It is hoped and expected that through successive Court decisions a body of international law may be gradually formulated and universally accepted.

The only means of enforcing the judgments of the Court are public opinion and national honor. But these have proved sufficient. The Court is in this respect much in the position of the United States Supreme Court.

The Court will not be even when universally accepted, an absolute preventative of war. There may be for a long time matters which nations concerned will refuse to submit to it. Perhaps neither the North or the South at the time of our Civil War would have submitted its case. But there are coun-less questions that tend to cause international friction such as interpretations of treaties, supposed infringements of the rights of our nation by another, the proper reparation for such infringement, and so forth. If left unsettled such questions rankle and as they accumulate produce the irritation that at last breaks out into war. On the other hand their settlement as they arise and the honorable acceptance of Court decisions tends to produce that mutual respect and friendliness which are the best preventative of war.

A GREAT SUCCESS

Annual Play Festival Attracts Thousands at Newton Centre Playground Wednesday Afternoon

The annual Playground Festival of the Playground Department was held Wednesday afternoon on the Newton Centre playground. Between four and five thousand were attracted by the excellent program which showed all the activities of the department for the past summer. About 2500 children took part in the various games and dances on the grounds. The old infield and quarter mile track were roped off as a stage. While the feature of the program was the folk dancing it was truly a Play Festival as practically the entire afternoon was devoted to the final rounds of games scheduled throughout the summer.

The city was divided into four districts at the beginning of the season, each district held preliminary tournaments and the champions of each district competed against each other at the Festival. Among the games which were demonstrated were fist-ball, dodge-ball, snatch-the-handkerchief, rope quoits, clock-ball, etc. These games, in which the children showed excellent form, were interspersed with athletic events, such as obstacle, relay, and other races.

The ceremonies were opened with a salute to the flag and the singing of "America." A huge American flag had been suspended from a light weight rod to which about 200 toy balloons had been fastened. At the moment of the salute these were released and the flag floated in the air. The children stood amazed at the spectacle for several moments.

A very remarkable exhibit of hand work, representing all the playgrounds, was staged at one end of the field. Much of this work had been done by the children with materials donated by the women of Newton. Many toys and useful articles, all made by the children, were shown. The boys' work was mostly along carpentry lines but the girls' work covered every phase such as the cutting of paper patterns to the making of artistic pieces of embroidery, hats, dolls, etc. Two special features of the exhibit were a huge model boat, six feet in length, made by the boys of Victory Field, and a window frame fitted with curtains, which the boys

BOY SCOUTS

Mr. Woodbridge conducted a hike of Troop 11 scouts last Saturday to their camp in the Ohio. Scouts McTarnahan, Jordan and Gramzow remained overnight and good progress was made in getting the cabin in shape for fall hiking.

We hope soon to be able to announce the formation of a new troop in the west end of the city. There are three sections now in Newton that ought to have troops and all that is lacking is the scoutmasters. Oak Hill, Nonantum and Lower Falls should have troops as there are many boys of scout age in these sections that are eager for scouting. MEN are required to put over the program, men that are willing to make this fine form of Public Service a part of their recreation. With the excellent camping facilities that Norumbega Council now has it would not seem to be a difficult matter to interest men in taking up this important work. The Council purchased thirty-three acres of land in Dover last year, commonly known as "The Ohio" which is ideal for camping and there are now five good permanent camps built there with more in immediate prospect. These camps have been built by or for different troops and in addition Troop 4 of Newton Highlands has a fine camp just off the property for their use.

There are four troops in West Newton, one in Auburndale, one in Newtonville, one in Newton (Corner), two in Newton Centre, one in Waban, one in Newton Upper Falls and the CUP troop in Newton Highlands. It is proposed to establish two Seacoast Ships this fall, one in Newton and one on the south side with the headquarters on the Charles near Upper Falls.

ROTARY CLUB

At the regular meeting and dinner of the Rotary Club at the Woodland Park Golf Club, Monday, the speaker was Colonel Dickson, commandant of the Watertown Arsenal. Colonel Dickson gave a history of this important plant which was started in 1814 as a naval depot. Besides making gun castings, gun carriages and other artillery parts for the army, the arsenal renders invaluable work to industries of this nation through its testing machines and laboratories. It has X-ray contrivances that will photograph through thick steel ingots and devices that will measure down to a billionth part of an inch.

Colonel Dickson related how zealous the officers and civilian employees at the arsenal are in their devotion to their work and he criticized departmental red tape which prevented certain of the employees from being adequately compensated. He invited all present to inspect the arsenal.

Miss Dorothy Curtis of Newtonville and Harold Cole of the Arlington Rotary Club presided at the piano and some new Rotary songs were sung with gusto by the members present. Secretary George Haynes was presented with a handsome rug as a wedding present by his fellow members. "Bill" Halliday, who made the presentation speech, remarked that Fred Howe is the only member of the Club not in captivity. Mr. Halliday also delivered a brief eulogy on the late

Chamber of Commerce Holds Enjoyable Outing At McPeake's Shore Gardens At Nantasket

The annual outing of the Newton Chamber of Commerce was held Wednesday afternoon at McPeake's Shore Gardens, Nantasket. The outing was a great success and was well attended by members of the Chamber, their guests and members of the city government. An automobile parade left the corner of Centre and Richardson streets shortly after one o'clock and proceeded through Nonantum Square to Newtonville and Newton Centre. Arriving at Nantasket about two-thirty dinner was served to one hundred and twenty-six. President Thompson spoke a few words of welcome and called upon Mayor Edwin O. Childs to speak. The Mayor spoke briefly on the good that came to men, whose business made them competitors of each other, by getting together and becoming better acquainted with one another.

A group picture was taken of the gathering after which a ball game was played between the Newton Corner team and a team from the rest of the city. The game was won by the Newton Corner team 7-6, the All-Newton team not being able to score enough runs off of Frank Feeley and Edgar Burkhardt to win.

A program of sports and races was run off by Norman Appleyard of Newton Centre, chairman of the sports committee, prizes being awarded to the various winners. A total of 102 prizes were offered and these had a value of over $600. A fifty dollar check was given to Sam Cohen of West street, Newton, holder of the lucky number. This check entitled Cohen to a fifty dollar rebate on any car bought from the Newton Motor Car Company, agents of the Maxwell and Chrysler and donors of the check.

Frank Fell won the brown derby in the fat men's race.

Harold Moore of Newton was chairman of the committee of arrangements; George Campbell, treasurer, and Norman Appleyard, chairman of the sports committee.

After the races a number of prizes were awarded to those whose names were on tickets drawn from a basket by President Thompson.

The winners in the various events follows:

100-yard Dash—Boyd, Hawkes, Alexander, Houghton, Brimblecom.
Fat Men's Race—Connelly, Kiley, Burkhardt, Marshall, Rosenberg, Fell.
Shoe Race—Burkhardt, Fell, Stephens, Trione, Holton.

10,000 MILES O'ER LAND AND SEA

While the invitations to the newspapermen to accompany the fleet in its maneuvers in Hawaiian waters ran until June 6th, the fact that Lahaina roads was to be the base of most of the maneuvers, and Lahaina was a long distance from Honolulu, and also because most of us thought that any operations after the sham battle for the island would be in the nature of an anti-climax, led all of us to cut short our stay in Hawaii, and nearly every steamer out of Honolulu about the middle of May carried some members of our party.

I managed to obtain last minute accommodations on the steamer Maui sailing about the middle of May. On board the ship I found U. S. Senator Goss and his wife from West Virginia, and Congressman Oliver of Alabama, Ayres of Kansas and Taber of New York, besides several newspapermen. I was honored with an invitation to sit at the captain's table with the Senator and members of Congress, and found them most congenial company.

The Hawaiians have a most comprehensive and beautiful word in "aloha" used as a welcome or greeting and also as an affecting farewell. They use it in a most sincere and pleasing manner and it makes a deep impression on every visitor.

Another beautiful custom when they speed the parting guest is to place a chain of flowers, or ribbon or paper around the neck as you say farewell or rather "aloha" on the wharf. The measure of one's popularity is indicated by the number of these chains or "leis" around your neck. One person I noted on the dock had so many that he could hardly see over them. As the steamer leaves the dock, roll after roll of ribbon confetti is thrown from wharf to ship and from ship to wharf, as if everyone was loath to leave the island and made a last attempt to remain there by means of these fragile ties.

The trip of approximately 2100 miles takes six days, and I realized before it was over that the Pacific Ocean has a tremendous amount of water. We had a fairly smooth trip, only one day of heavy weather at sea but it was a long, long trail winding over the expanse of water.

A daily paper, in multigraphed form is provided for the passengers, and moving pictures every night, with an Hawaiian orchestra playing during the day and evening were features of the voyage.

The change in time is noted each day, and posted bulletins advised us to change our watches on an average of 20 minutes a day.

Coming into San Francisco harbor we had to satisfy the Immigration officers that we were entitled to land, and we had to submit to a search of our baggage by the Department of Agriculture to make certain that we did not bring any plant disease into California.

I stayed in San Francisco only for the day, taking a night train for Los Angeles.

While my visit in Los Angeles lasted some three weeks, I suffered considerably from a touch of neuritis in the arm, and in consequence did not see very much of the city.

I was struck with the splendid handling of the traffic problem in the busiest section of the city, but when I mentioned this fact on the way home in the Pullman smoker, I was informed by a resident of Los Angeles that traffic conditions in that city were abominable. Possibly both of us were right, as my observation was limited to the downtown traffic, and I saw but little of traffic in conditions outside the busy district.

The downtown traffic has been educated to move as directed. At each cross street there is an automatic gong, and semaphores with the words "Stop" or "Go" on them. At the stroke of the gong, pedestrians move with the "Go" signal, five seconds later, another gong starts automobiles in the same direction. A half minute later, the sound of the gong stops traffic in one direction and pedestrians start in the other direction. It is noticeable that pedestrians obey the regulations as well as the automobiles, and there is no jay walking whatever on the streets.

The trip homeward included a visit to the far famed Yosemite valley, and if I had been somewhat sadly disillusioned in some of the much touted scenery in other parts of the country, here in Yosemite I found that "the half had not been told."

In the first place I visited the Valley at the most favorable time of the year, when there was plenty of water in the lakes and streams and when the foliage was green and luxuriant. I am told that later in the season, the falls have considerable less water, the heat is intense, and the foliage turns drab and brown. So let me advise any one intending to visit Yosemite to do so as early in June as possible.

The world's best writers have paid inadequate tributes to the beauties of the Yosemite, and I shall not even attempt to compete with them in this respect.

I am still undecided in my own mind, just which one of its attractions I consider the best. For the valley is a beautiful spot set down between steep walled cliffs, rising 3500 feet all around. The massive granite of El Capitan rivals the world renowned Gibraltar, while the waterfalls in various parts of the valley are marvels of sheer beauty. The Yosemite fall is particularly beautiful, as it has a straight drop of 1400 feet from the point where it dashes over the edge of the cliff, then it cascades several hundred feet more, with another drop of 600 feet to the floor of the valley. It is a wonderful sight.

The Bridge Fall is not so high, having a drop of some 600 feet, but one can get a trifle nearer to it than it is possible at the Yosemite. The Vernal and Nevada falls, both on the same stream are also "easy to the eyes," as the saying goes.

Accommodations in the Valley are on the camp style, with lodgings in tents and bungalows, with a central dining room. At Camp Curry they have an interesting attraction each night about nine o'clock, when the embers of a large bonfire at the top of the cliff are thrown over the edge, making a fire fall of some 1400 feet which lasts for several minutes. This bonfire is built on the grounds of the Glacier Point hotel, a hotel which has a marvelous view not only of the valley some 3000 feet below, but of the surrounding range of mountains, all of which are snow capped. If I ever visit Yosemite again, and it is one of the beauty spots that I hope to revisit, I shall plan to stay over night at the Glacier Point hotel to enjoy the sunrise as well as the marvelous view from that point.

We made a day's trip to the Mariposa grove of big trees—wonderful productions of nature, well worth the long ride the visit entailed.

Let me suggest that you read the glowing description contained in the pamphlet issued by the U. S. Park service on the Yosemite, and which is not in the least overdrawn, in my opinion.

The one uncomfortable fact about the Yosemite, is its distance from the main railroad lines, the trip requiring some 45 or 50 miles up the canyon of the Merced River, with 15 miles of automobile at the end. Returning, I was somewhat impressed with the lack of Pullman accommodations at Merced for persons coming away from Yosemite, especially with travellers en route for San Francisco. The large amount of traffic certainly deserves better treatment than was given the day I was there this summer.

Two days of interesting sightseeing followed in San Francisco, before we took the train for home. I had planned to stop off at Salt Lake City, and Colorado Springs, but the urge to reach home was too strong for further delays, and we merely got glimpses from the car windows of the Feather River Canyon, the Royal Gorge, and the beautiful mountains of Colorado.

The Berkshires never looked more beautiful, and Massachusetts never more lovely than the day we entered the old Bay State after a pilgrimage of ten weeks and covering about 10,000 miles of land and water, for it was "home, sweet home" and we found here as always that "chance" from the skies, that is never found elsewhere.

J. C. BRIMBLECOM.

P. S. We newspapermen assumed that in inviting us to be the guests of the Navy the Department was anxious to have the press of the country gather first hand knowledge of the Navy, its work and its needs and its personnel. We assumed, also, that we were to be informed regarding the recent public agitation regarding the establishment of a separate air service department, as the Navy views it.

I had no decided opinions one way or the other when I accepted the invitation, but I returned thoroughly convinced that so far as the Navy is concerned, it should retain control of its own air force. I think one illustration is sufficient to show any reasonable person why this opinion is sound. The present range of the 14 and 16-inch guns of the battleships, is from 12 to 15 miles, a point which is below the horizon from the attacking ship. It is needless to say that to be effective, the gunner should have the assistance of an observation plane to give him information, and information regarding the unseen target, and if the observation planes are to be effective there must be fighting planes to protect them while at their work. I think it goes without saying, that the observation and fighting planes should work in close harmony with the battleship, and should be under the control of the same department—any other course would certainly lead to confusion and loss of effectiveness.

I am indebted to Commander Bruce R. Ware, Jr., a former Newton resident for the following comparisons regarding battleships and aviation:

"The modern dreadnaught possesses other means of defense against missiles dropped by aircraft—namely speed and change of course. A bomb dropped from a height of six miles requires 28 seconds to reach the deck of a ship. In 28 seconds a 25 knot ship moves over one fifth of a mile on her course. If the air pilot maintains a correct position himself but errs one-half a degree in estimating the battleship's course, the bomb will fall 100 feet away from the target. Also think how hard it will be for the air pilot to remain calm, carefully pilot his own position, for in addition to the new 5-inch gun that throws a 50-pound weight to a height of 15 miles and at the rate of 14 per minute, or from a battleship's entire anti-aircraft battery, 112 such 50 pound shots per minute, two a second, the battleship has numerous machine guns, each gun firing 400 half-in. projectiles a minute to a height of five miles. With such an onslaught can the air pilot maintain his course within half a degree and make a hit? In the case of the attack against the defenseless Iowa making but six knots, out of 80 single attacks, from an altitude of only two miles, but two hits were made. This is also conclusive. The attack on the Washington. Here a partially completed, stationary, defenseless battleship, passive, unresisting accepted the terrific punishment of three 2000 pound bombs and two 100 pound torpedo charges, also one 14-inch shell weighing 1440 pounds (three quarters of a ton) dropped from a height of two miles point down, and failed to penetrate her deck. This hit was made on the twelfth attempt, the first eleven having failed and after three aiming flights; in war a plane cannot stay for eleven attempts and three aiming flights, it must enter and strike. After suffering the explosion of three underwater bombs of the largest size and two torpedo explosions also of the largest size, directly against her hull, with no repair of leaks and no pumps going the Washington remained afloat four days, think of that, to be finally sunk by 14 hits of 14-inch shells fired at very oblique angles of impact by the battleship Texas and not by airplanes.

The results of these tests demonstrated that the hull of the latest type of American battleship is capable of withstanding the attack of aerial bombs, and that with a crew on board to make repairs, run the pumps and man the anti-aircraft guns, such a ship as the Washington would be secure against air attack.

To this let me add the statements of the officers of the Tennessee that in case of an aerial bombardment they were of the opinion that the safest place in war was on board a battleship.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER

Leverett D. G. Bentley

Frequently of late we have seen men and women bearing clusters of gladioli (or if you prefer the English to the Latin) gladioli, in their hands. These folk we have encountered on the street, in the train and in the trolley. We assumed, and no doubt rightly, they were taking the beautiful flowers to some friend or acquaintance as a token of esteem and incidentally to permit them to see "how well the garden is doing this year." We believe the distribution of attractive blooms a highly desirable custom and unhesitatingly offer our approval. We do not know of a flower that offers such a fund of material for discussion as the gladiolus. By this we mean discussion of the pronunciation. The singular, gladiolus, we seldom hear used. The plural, gladioli, as far as our observation has permitted, is equally uncommon. By the way, we once heard a rural gardener say that it sounded too much like "galluses"—a rustic nickname for suspenders. That however, is not, in our opinion, the reason it is not more commonly used. The flower is practically always referred to in the Latin plural, gladioli. But there appear two pronunciations. For years and years, according to the silver-greys of the human race, the word was gladi-o-li. The accent was on the "o". A new way and one frequently employed at present, is gladi-oli, with the accent on the "i". Here is plainly a subject for hot weather debate. One has the right to say it either way, or both for that matter. We have really become confused ourselves. The "o" has always been our favorite, but we are willing the "i's" should have it, providing they are in the majority. We reserve the right to lay all the emphasis we possess upon the "o". We tried to take a straw vote on the question for the benefit of the readers of this column but are not prepared to give the figures that show the result. In fact, we admit that there was no way of telling, for people who stressed the "o" were content to have you use the "i" if you spoke kindly of the specimens themselves. It doesn't really matter, as far as our investigations showed, but still it is interesting. We did reach a conclusion, as we always strive to do. It was this: those who never cultivate or run a garden but who rave over these flowers say, "gladi-oli," while those who grow them and spend many hours in patient care of the plants call them "gladi-o-li."

There is always a temptation to assume the "I-told-you-so" attitude. Without appearing to hold such an unpleasant position among our fellow townsmen we would like to comment on a subject which we believe is worthy of our readers' attention. It may be remembered that some time ago we pleaded for the immediate reconstruction of the police and fire signal systems of Newton. We felt, when we expressed our views in this column, that we were sure of our grounds and were not indulging in criticism based on snap judgment or upon something that had been told us by a third party. Not so very long ago a study of the whole matter was made by a special committee of the Board of Aldermen and its report printed in the GRAPHIC. Although not disposed to place our views above those who had given time and effort to a complete consideration of the situation, we still remained unconvinced. We said nothing, however, believing that the wisdom of the city fathers would better serve to guide the people of Newton than our own sage writings. We feel, however, justified in calling attention to an incident that came under our own observation and which was not retailed to us by any man, woman or child. We happened to be on the Centre-street bridge one morning recently and from a distance saw a young man driving a coupe, struck by a motor truck. We saw, almost a second or two after the crash, a policeman rush to the police signal box at the corner of Hall and Centre streets. We saw that the box failed to work and we saw that the officer lost no time in rushing into Moore & Moore's store and using the public telephone to call an ambulance. Now then here is exactly the situation we have declared would sometime arise. The police signal system is not only antiquated but for the greater part of the time useless. We are told at police headquarters that a plain duty call is quite as likely to register in the tape as a call for the patrol wagon. What kind of signal system is that? Of course we shall expect to hear it said, "With so many public telephones available an officer can easily notify headquarters." True—in the day time. But how many residents are going to sit up all night in order that they may proffer the use of their telephones to the officer on the route in the event of an emergency? Suppose the accident in question had occurred in the middle of the night? How many public telephones would have been available? We still maintain that Newton has outgrown a police and fire signal system that had become obsolete fifteen years ago.

The absence of a clock on the waiting room wall in the local Boston & Albany station is another indication of the new order of things. People can no longer consult the veteran time-piece, supposed to be super-accurate because "they get the correct time from Washington by telegraph," for the reason that it isn't there to be consulted. It is extremely doubtful if they would were the opportunity given them. The railroad station is not the part of a community's daily life that it used to be. There are many more ways of traveling and the railroad depot doesn't have the patronage or the "hangers-on" it once had. The road management probably sees a saving of money in doing away with station clocks. The story has come to be the higher the fares the fewer the accommodations. At least that is the way with suburban service. The rural stations never were much and are less now, but, somehow, they haven't deprived them of clocks. We happened to find ourselves Boston-bound at a small station sixty-odd miles from Boston. There, however, was the clock. It seemed more like a real railroad waiting-room to hear the loud and solemn ticking. Although high up on the wall it was in sight of the handful of would-be passengers. One man read a newspaper and regularly glanced at it. That particular train was delayed, but only for a few minutes, and for that reason the clock was not essential as it would have been. How many can remember reaching the station long before the scheduled time for the train's departure and sitting quietly on a bench and watching the hands of the clock slowly move around? We know there are few families who do not include somebody who insists upon "getting there" far ahead of the train. There are those who are afraid they may miss a train. To these the old clock must be something like a faithful friend. What about the time you were there to welcome somebody back from a long journey? The clock became a part of the event and you never failed to feel grateful to it. But now there are fewer railroad clocks and they are run on standard time and they are funny-looking old things anyway and well, let's be cheerful and not sad over an ordinary clock.

In attempting to offer our readers one or two sidelights on the Governor's coal conference which have not yet found their way into newspaper, we trust we possess material that will interest them. Gov. Fuller, who is as discerning as he is intensive, lost no time after the conference had assembled, in calling upon John F. Hammond for his views. Mr. Hammond, having served as chairman of the Federal Coal Commission two years ago, is the best informed man in United States, apart from one who is directly interested, as to fuel conditions. Mr.

NO-NOX MOTOR FUEL

Introducing a NEW AUTOMOBILE FUEL

NO-NOX is a new automotive fuel that increases fuel efficiency, increases power, lessens waste, eliminates fuel knocks and the poor operating conditions that such knocks indicate, and prevents all harmful effects of carbonization.

With NO-NOX in the tank of your car you may step on the accelerator without a motor knock thus accelerating quicker, handle your car in traffic better and go over the hills with greater power and ease.

For an extended period of time, extensive experiments and research work have been carried on in the Gulf Refining Company Laboratories, and test cars driven thousands of miles to develop this more efficient fuel for internal combustion engines—we know it is right—but

The only way to realize the benefits of this new fuel is to make an actual trial of it in your car. Drive to a Gulf Service Station or Gulf Dealer today, and ask the attendant for NO-NOX.

NO-NOX is guaranteed to be no more harmful to man or motor than ordinary gasoline and is priced only three cents per gallon higher than That Good Gulf gasoline.

GULF REFINING COMPANY

Hammond spoke simply and directly. He is not an orator, although a most convincing speaker. He wastes no words and never lifts his voice above the conversational tone. His sense of humor is keen and without the slightest attempt to introduce irrelevant matter he can send a subtle thrust as far as any man. A joke on himself he appears to relish hugely. As a matter of fact Mr. Hammond would like to have had some one else made chairman of the New England Coal Conference—an organization that has come into existence as a result of this meeting.

ated and the nomination seconded. Mr. Hammond looked a trifle puzzled. "Isn't there somebody else?" he asked. "I am not sure that I am able to give the time it requires." Gov. Fuller assured him that the man who had been selected for Secretary, Representative Henry L. Shattuck of Boston, would be of immense assistance to him. "We want you, Mr. Hammond, because you are a citizen of Massachusetts," said James J. Storrow, who sat at his right. "If you are not a citizen of this State we will make you one."

"I am a citizen of Massachusetts by taxation," replied Mr. Hammond. Not a bad line, taxpayers will no doubt agree. Mr. Hammond showed his grasp of affairs as he talked. His manner proved clearly that his was not impressed with his own greatness. "You know," he smiled, as he glanced in the direction of the newspapermen, "I almost hesitate to speak to our President when I meet him for fear the newspapers will say that I am in conference with him on the subject of the tariff."

The State Tax Commissioner, in publishing a list of parcels of real estate in the 39 Massachusetts cities possessing the highest tax valuation, shows that although the bank property in Nonantum Square, valued at $4.00 a square foot, held first place in this city in 1921, the lot at the corner of Centre and Washington streets, where the public market stood and where a new building is now in process of erection, stands at the head of the list in this city. The valuation is $8.50 a square foot. This helps to a better understanding of the failure of the city government to seize the land for the purpose of widening Nonantum Square.

EDITORIAL

—With this issue the GRAPHIC completes twenty-five years under its present management. For a full quarter of a century it has been our privilege as well as our business to record the growth of our beautiful city.

We have noted the increase in population, the erection of hundreds of beautiful homes, the tremendous growth in cost as well as extent of our educational facilities, the growth of the Newton Hospital, the inauguration of our Playground system, and many other events of equal importance.

It has been a period of interest and education for the editor and an experience which we will always treasure.

We have tried to serve this city as we believe it should have been served. We are fully cognizant of our failures and are naturally pleased with our small successes. We hope in the future to give even better service than in the past, and assure our readers that whatever occurs we shall always endeavor to be sincere and honest in both our news and editorial columns.

STORES TO CLOSE SEPT. 2

A canvass of a substantial number of Newton merchants has developed a strong sentiment in favor of extending the weekly half-holiday schedule into September to include next Wednesday afternoon, September 2, which falls this year in the week before Labor Day. With that holiday generally accepted as the turning point between the vacation season and the time for getting down to business for the fall and winter, it is felt that it is both consistent and desirable to make an extension beyond the usual three-month closing schedule this year.

With the public still concerned with vacation matters and looking forward to a final outing over the following Sunday and Labor Day, it is believed that terminating the series of weekly half-holidays before Labor Day will not result in any gain to local merchants or any inconvenience to the public.

It is therefore recommended that all Newton stores which have been closing on Wednesday afternoons during the past three months continue the plan for one more week, to include next Wednesday, September 2. Announcement is also made to the people of Newton that if one may judge from the sentiment already expressed—a large majority of the Newton stores will be closed on next Wednesday afternoon. The proposal has been considered by a majority of the members of the Mercantile Committee of the Newton Chamber of Commerce and has the approval of that body.

THE NEWTON ARCHERS

At the recent National Tournament at Rome, New York, the Newton Archers' ladies' team won the team shoot. Miss Dorothy Smith of Newton Centre, won the championship again, with a total score of 1632. She had a close rival most of the time this year in Miss Stella Ives of Rosindale. Miss Smith also holds for the next year, the Bryant cup for the best score at 60 yards in a National Round and has the honor of having her name engraved upon it because of her high score.

Dr. Paul Crouch of Brighton won the men's championship of the National and brought home the Novelty prize. Souvenirs of hunting arrows, unique quivers, and pencils, were brought home by all archers.

Y. M. C. A.

The Newton Y. M. C. A. baseball team defeated the strong Sherborn A. A. team at Sherborn last Saturday by the score of 4 to 3. Wilmot Whitney, ex-Newton High and Harvard pitcher was in the box for Sherborn and Cook, formerly with the Winter Hill B. C., was on the mound for the "Y." Another game will be played at Sherborn on September 12th and it is expected that "Ned" Mahan and "Heinie" Nash will strengthen the Sherborn team.

The "Y" team has defeated the Newton Pals, the Earnshaw Mill and the West Newton A. A. team and is now anxious to book a series of games with the Saxony Mill team for the championship of Newton.

EPWORTH LEAGUE ORGANIZED

At a picnic held at Lake Walden Saturday, August 15th, the young people of the Cline Memorial M. E. Church of Newton Highlands organized an Epworth League. The officers for the coming year are as follows: President, Katherine Knudson; 1st Vice-President, George Sanderson; 2nd Vice-President, Dorothy Hazen; 3rd Vice-President, Anna Bacon; 4th Vice-President, Douglas Hammond; Secretary, Dorothy Sweet and Treasurer, Carl MacLean. The first meeting will be held on the opening day of Sunday School, Sept. 13th, and the installation will take place sometime in October.

LODGES

Grand Master Arthur F. Douglass of the Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Massachusetts, has appointed the following district deputy grand masters in Newton: Freedom Wentworth of Newton Lodge; William R. Turnball of Waban Lodge; Waban, and Benjamin T. Tarbox of Home Lodge, Newton Highlands.

HOLE-IN-ONE

Mrs. William A. Larkin, of Woodland Golf Club, is the only woman to ever score a hole-in-one on the Woodland course. The feat was accomplished Sunday afternoon during a foursome match in which Mrs. Larkin was one of the participants, on the number five hole of 165 yards. This also is the first time that this hole, formerly the tenth hole, has been made in one stroke.

A GREAT SUCCESS

and girls of the Stearns playground had made.

What is probably the first and the most successful attempt made in Playground work was represented by an exhibition of about 100 children's hats made of all kinds of left over materials. The exhibit was beautiful and attracted considerable attention and pleased the mothers greatly. This work was in charge of Mrs. Beatrice Porter of Newton.

The Stearns Playground Handicraft Exhibit deserves special mention it being one of the most artistic displays on the field. This playground has had two special instructors during the summer who have given the children an extension course in the work, under the direction of Mrs. Hoveguard.

Another notable feature of the afternoon was the folk dances. Wearing crepe paper costumes, made by themselves, they were a beautiful sight in their artistic setting.

An esthetic dance in which four of the best dancers each lead a group of twenty couples was one of the most pleasing events on the program. This dance was under the direction of Mrs. Hills and Miss Kerriann.

Mrs. Henry of Newton and Mrs. Rogers of Newton Centre were the judges of the handicraft competition. The summer work in this art has been under the direction of Miss Furbush and Mr. Young.

The judges of the folk dancing were Miss Andrews of the Sargent School, Mrs. Weston of Auburndale, and a former supervisor of folk dancing on the Newton playgrounds, and Miss Brown a former playground director.

Mr. Albert P. Carter, chairman of the Playground Commission, Mr. Charles F. Johnson, Jr., and Mr. Thomas J. Lyons, members of the Commission were present. Mr. Johnson in introducing the chairman, Mr. Carter, who distributed the prizes, paid a tribute to the former chairman of the commission, Mr. William Conant Brewer, who died a few months ago.

The program closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

ROTARY CLUB

Howard Tuttle and the members rose to pay a silent tribute to his memory. Two future Rotarians were present—the young sons of "Joe" Crowell.

President Ira Roe will have a less difficult time in keeping the meeting in order in the future. Some unknown donor presented the club with a handsome miniature ship bell and striker, which has the ordinary gavel beaten five ways.

THOMAS VOLNEY THORNTON

Mr. Thomas V. Thornton died after an illness of a few hours August 23, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Swain Thomas. Mr. Thornton had made his home with his daughter for some years and has made many friends in Newton.

He was born in 1848 in Paoli, Indiana, and was the oldest of eight children. At an early age he assumed the responsibility of the family on account of the death of his father. Mr. Thornton was a graduate of Hanover College, and of the Indiana University Law School.

He married Annie Martin of Evansville, Indiana, and made his home in Bedford for many years. Mr. Thornton owned and operated the first quarry of the now famous Indiana lime stone and was among the first to develop Bedford and the section.

Mr. Thornton was a man public spirited and progressive and among many things he did for Bedford was the organizing of the Electric Light and Water Systems and the promoting of a Building and Loan Association, one of the first in Indiana. He gave the land and planned a beautiful cemetery, and this stands as another memorial to his interest in Bedford.

In 1897 Mr. Thornton moved to Indianapolis and his health failed yet always retaining his keen interest in business and civic affairs. A member of the Presbyterian church, he was an example of the old fashioned Christian gentleman, with charity and love toward all. Although saddened by many sorrows he kept a happy and cheerful outlook on life.

A son Mr. George D. Thornton of Indianapolis and a daughter, Mrs. Charles Swain Thomas of West Newton survive him.

It can truly be said of Mr. Thornton, "None knew him but to love him, none named him but to praise."

CITY HALL

Miss Florence McCarthy of the Treasurer's office was given a gold shower by the employees of City Hall last Friday. On September 14th Miss McCarthy will become the bride of Traffic Officer Ray Tate.

Fire Chief Clarence Randall was an official guest at the Marshall 150th anniversary on "Fireman's Day" Wednesday. Building Commissioner C. C. Chadwick stated yesterday that permits issued to date for the month of August have as high a valuation as those for July. It is expected that by the first of September that the value of permits issued since January 1 will be about nine millions. This is more than double the value of permits issued to date last year. As the aldermen have several large buildings in mind it is probable that the great increase in valuation will lower the 1925 tax rate.

A TRIBUTE

The going out of a good man from earth deserves more than a passing notice. In the passing of Amos M. Leonard, a good man—a true friend—a devoted son, husband, and brother, has gone from earth.

Born of sound New England stock in Stoughton, Mass., October 18, 1840, he lived to exemplify the best of New England traditions. A bright, busy lad, yearning for an education he worked hard to acquire the same and after four years at Harvard, with little or no help, he graduated to go very early into teaching.

For forty years he was Headmaster of the South Boston Grammar School (named after Amos Lawrence) where, by his efficient work, and his kind, tactful influence over a large school of boys, alone, he was loved and respected by all—teachers and pupils alike.

Faithful to every duty, kind and courteous to all, he lived the life of a true, Christian gentleman. His memory is sweet to all who knew and loved him.

A COMMUNICATION

Editor Newton Graphic:

It has oftentimes been said that competition is the life of trade, and judging from the number of contractors and sub-contractors working on the new high school, who appear to have offices in cities anywhere but in Newton, that our own master mechanics must have felt as though they had been put into the well of perpetual youth, because all they apparently received was the "life" because the "trade" was given elsewhere.

I do not question but that they were permitted to bid on the contracts, but it seems very strange that out of the hundreds of shops in this city that there was no one who could come near enough to land any of the work.

Our own live chamber of commerce endorses "dollar days," we are trained from years of reading advertisements to trade in Newton; in fact we are in the position of the man talking to his minister who was told by him "to do as he told him, not as he done." When it comes to awarding a contract over a dollar, the whole known civilized world is searched to find an outsider to figure on the job that rightfully belongs to local talent.

Indeed, if by chance, the bids of the local men were a shade higher, what of it? Because there is the possibility that they might be the only ones to have received some of this money spent, but as it remains now nothing is left in this city and the well wishes of the men who take away the money to their home towns, and the refreshing thought that the golden nuggets have gone but are not forgotten.

In closing I would suggest that the next time it becomes necessary to choose a lot to build a city building upon, the officials merely call in some "interested outsider," and let him select a place that will be handy for the out of town mechanic to reach when he comes to erect the new building. Thank you.

JOHN H. MURRAY.

It was William Dawes, too, who set the British by the ears when he spirited away two cannon pieces that were to be surrendered to Gates' army, secreting them in the wood box of the old schoolhouse on Mason street, much to the delight of the youngsters who saw the manoeuvre, and who, although later aged at and threatened by the angry British soldiers who suspected they knew something of the escape, maintained a solemn, non-committal countenance, while loyally keeping the precious secret. We can imagine the long-faced school master, meanwhile, sitting solemnly, motionless, and emotionless, with his feet securely planted upon said wood box! Later these cannon were sent to Waltham by boat and were in active use during the war.

At the time of the first taking of the cannon, however, Dawes had a sleeve button forced into his wrist, while lifting them, and he was obliged to have surgical aid for the removal of this button. Henry Holland tells us that it was no less a personage than Dr. Warren, who gave this surgical aid, and he, knowing full well the adventurous character of his patient, naturally was fully aware of the connection this injury had with the splendid news with which the whole town was ringing, but he gave no sign of his suspicions, and with his usual adroit discretion, spoke no word of the injury to anyone.

The part that William Dawes played in those stirring doings of April 18th and 19th is splendidly told by Henry Holland in his history of the family, and the 18th, according to him, must have been a thrilling day for Dawes, good Dr. Joseph Warren, and many another patriot, on whose shoulders responsibility rested!

That afternoon Warren learned from several sources that the British were about to move, their destination being naturally suspected as Concord where the stores of war material were fast accumulating, and where, somewhere, were Hancock and Adams and other Revolutionary leaders. A gunsmith named Jasper had the tip from a British sergeant, and he told Col. Waters of the Committee of Safety, Dawes' cousin, who of course informed William, and William hastened to Dr. Warren. Also John Ballard, in a Milk Street stable, heard one of the Province House grooms say that "they would be hell to pay before tomorrow," and made a pretext to run with the news to another friend of liberty, and a little later it was observed that a number of soldiers were marching towards Boston Common, which ran down to the landing place on the shore. The whole town, adds Henry Holland, was on the watch, every citizen a detective, and Warren was kept well informed. He waited until they actually began to move in their boats, and then he sent Dawes out at once by the land route over the neck and across the river at Brighton Bridge to Cambridge and Lexington and immediately afterward he sent for Revere to go by water to arouse the country and especially to acquaint Hancock and Adams of the movement, by way of Charlestown and Lexington.

We all know how Revere aroused Hancock with his famed shout of there being noise enough before morning when rebuked by a guard for being noisy near their abiding place, and we know how Hancock and Adams made their escape and hid in a swamp, then made their way to Amos Wyman's in Billerica where they dined at last on cold salt pork and potatoes served on a wooden tray instead of upon the very fine salmon for which their mouths were watering, and which had been promised them at the Woburn homestead of Widow Jones (whether it had been arranged that Dorothy Quincy was to bring it, when they had to flee), but alas, a second retreat, and a hairbreadth escape lost for them this tempting meal a second time.

We know that Dawes arrived at Arlington and met Revere there, and that he arrived also at Lexington, but not until he had had some wild adventures. His quick wit is shown when, near Hartwell's Tavern in lower Lincoln, he met some British officers, and while Prescott, the better mounted, jumped a stone wall and escaped, Dawes, chased by these soldiers, dashed up to an empty farmhouse, his leather breeches flapping, and shouted: "Halloo, boys, I've got two of 'em!"

And his pursuers, thinking he was leading them into a hotbed of friends, promptly turned and fled. In the excitement of this chase Dawes suddenly thrown from his horse, lost his watch, but regained it several days later, when he returned to search for it. There is probably no more arresting picture in war history than that of the defense of Concord by Lexington and Concord. Possibly that is why it seems the more singular that the only Watertown man to fall that day should have been a Coolidge, descendant of the first of this family in this very town. Joseph Coolidge was the great-grandson of Simon, second son of the original John and Mary, and, peculiarly, too, it is from Simon that it is thought the President descends. Almost Calvin Coolidge, then, has a part in that affair. Joseph Coolidge's descendants, proud of what he gave for his country, not only in this supreme sacrifice, but in earlier patriotic efforts, erected a handsome monument to him in the old Watertown burying-ground, not a rod from the spot where he John and Mary, and just one hundred years after Joseph's death, these descendants presented this memorial to the town of Watertown, which gladly, proudly accepted it April 19, 1875! A simple thing perhaps, but fraught with great memories and ideals!

From this man, among many others, for Joseph was not a young man when killed, but had left seven children, Hon. Richard Bradford Coolidge is descended. He is known as Mayor of Medford, and as a member of the House of Representatives in 1920 to 1922. Political leanings again, you see!

It may readily be seen why, after that wild ride to Lexington, capping his various other exploits against the British, Boston became too hot to hold William Dawes, Jr., and his helpful brother-in-law, John Coolidge, Dawes, therefore protected his family by removing them from Boston, although he himself still braved the British wrath in the army and other service, making weekly trips to Worcester with money and supplies for his wife and children.

But how did they happen to choose Worcester as a place of residence? The story must go back to the lives of the mother and father of John Coolidge. John Coolidge's father was Joseph Coolidge, born in Boston in 1718, the fifth generation of his particular branch and the first to be born other than in Watertown. He is descended from Jonathan, who married Martha Rice. Joseph had the exciting experience of marrying a Huguenot refugee! Marguerite Olivier, with her father Antoine Olivier, and other refugees (who now are represented in the Sigmund and Germaine families in the Boston-Lafayette family in La Rochelle, France, after the terrorizing revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. (The first volume of Antoine Olivier's French Bible printed in Paris in 1675, and containing the birth dates of his children, is now preserved in the Boston Athenaeum.)

That Marguerite Olivier was a most charming woman is attested by the fact that she married thrice in her career. Incidentally she outlived even her third husband, arriving at the age of ninety before she left this exciting world, and what a story those ninety years of French and American Revolution and Romance and adventure must have been!

Two of Marguerite and Joseph's sons were actively engaged in our Revolution. John was one of the three Johns who were at the battle of Bunker Hill and Joseph, known as "an ardent son of liberty," was one of the famous Indians of the Boston Tea Party. John enlisted in Capt. Jonathan Sedgwick's Company, Col. Henry Brattle's Regiment (Ward 5) of Boston, and in November 1776 a commission was ordered in council for him as a Second Lieutenant. His brother Joseph was likewise commissioned, and these two men, altogether too much to the forefront in activities against the British, and so honored by officerships, were not a bit popular with the British who were occupying Boston! It is noteworthy that this John Coolidge is the only John who ever received a commission in the Revolutionary War! There were other Coolidges who received commissions in this war but not a John.

In 1771 Joseph Coolidge, the father (he is buried in King's Chapel burying-ground), and the widow, grieving over this circumstance, went to Lancaster to live with her daughter, Margaret who had just married Jacob Sweetser of that town. In 1775, Marguerite Coolidge married Capt. Israel Jennison of Worcester, going to the latter city to live. And there is the connecting link—such a simple human fact, it a deliver into dry statistical records will but exercise a little common sense upon reading them. After all, these facts are based upon human lives, and as such have a meaning in the whys and wherefores of events. What more natural than for John Coolidge, looking for a safe haven for his wife and children to go to the city where his good mother was living? And what more natural than for William Dawes to send thither his wife and children, trusting to the friendship and protection of his good brother-in-law? That Dawes made this removal before February 22, 1776, is proven by the fact that a son, whom he named Charles Dawes, was born on this date in Worcester.

It hardly seems consistent that the man who rode so furiously into the dawn of April 19th should be found peaceably supplying staples to the good folk of Worcester only a few months later, but of such contrasts life is made up. And, after all, this mode of existence for Dawes was not really as tame as it sounded, for he was around Boston most of the time, leaving the business to his brother-in-law, while he further teased and exasperated the British. That his teasing was effectual is proven by the fact that his mansion house on the east side of Sudbury St. was torn down by the British during the occupation of Boston; just as the property of his cousin Thomas suffered. William's father, however, stubbornly refused to leave Boston during the exciting siege, and his two maiden sisters—Molly and Betty Boone—courageously and loyally remained to care for him at the Sudbury St. home, hiding the valuables and silver in a hole in the cellar.

William himself, usually disguised as a miller, or as a countryman selling his produce, made his trips between Boston and Worcester, taking each Saturday money for the support of his family. So he was able to keep on actively aiding the cause in which he was heart and soul. His sister, Mrs. Lucas covered his gold pieces with cloth and sewed them on his coat, to escape loss of his money, if suspected and searched, and as regularly his wife—Mehitable May—removed them from their covering and sewed back some cloth buttons in their stead. And in all the time that he practised this successful trickery it was never noted that he did not wear what was then the style—gold or brass buttons! So much for the keen eyes of men as regards the style! It is fortunate for him that woman did not serve actively in that war, for such lack of style would not have escaped her suspicion!

There is one amusing and hectic adventure related by which he had to feign drunkenness all one day, so having excuse to follow about some British officers on guard at the gates. He even followed them past his father's house, while attempting to avert their suspicion that he was anything but irresponsible, and so hoping eventually to be able to follow them through the lines, and not be challenged, but tolerated to depart. The second John Coolidge at Bunker Hill was the Lancaster-Bolton man, who is supposed to be the President's ancestor. He it was who married Hannah Priest of Marlboro in 1779, and who migrated to Saltah, Vermont, in 1781, and there cleared a farm. It is believed that these two emigrants, one from Lancaster, one from Bolton, are one and the same man. John Coolidge of Bolton served as a private in Capt. Robert Longley's Co., Col. Asa Whitcomb's Regiment, and also as a private in Capt. Artemas How's Co., while residing in that town, and while in Lancaster he was a private in Capt. Andrew Haskell's Co., Col. Thomas Marshall's Regiment. His Rhode Island service was still as a private in 1781—the last year in which he resided in Massachusetts—in Capt. David Moore's Co., Lieut.-Col. Hallett's Regiment. We do not find any record in Massachusetts or in Vermont that this man was ever commissioned either in the regular army of the Revolution or in the Militia after that war closed.

There have been various statements made in the newspapers by over-zealous persons to the effect that the ancestor of the President was commissioned a Captain in the Revolution and that he served on General Warren's staff. It is unfortunate that statements that can not be proven from authentic sources are so often indulged in either because they sound well, when connected with a name as high as the President's, or because persons are misinformed, but do not go to the trouble to be sure of their information. No one would deplore this more than the President himself, and it is his carefulness, truthfulness, and sense of honor—carried to an extreme that has endeared him to all the American people—that has given him his reputation and—more—his success. The only John Coolidge of Massachusetts who was ever commissioned a Captain that we have been able to find on record was the Sherborn man who was so commissioned during the French and Indian War and he was so inconsiderate as not to have been the President's ancestor! We think that confusion has arisen over the careers of the Boston John Coolidge who was commissioned a Lieutenant and who lived for a time at Worcester—mysteriously disappearing therefrom to return to Boston to live—and the Lancaster man. Genealogists and historians have probably jumped at false conclusion, when they could not find the Worcester man as still residing there, that he went over to Lancaster. The explanation as to how John Coolidge and his wife Lydia Dawes went to Worcester is logically carried forward by their return to Boston in 1779, or perhaps before, when, oddly and yet reasonably, too, he purchased from William Dawes, Sr., his father-in-law, a house on Sudbury street, that was part of the Jackson property of Dawes' wife. So that is why John Coolidge was no longer in Worcester, but had returned to the home of his people, and he did not by any means go to Lancaster.

That John Coolidge of Lancaster had not up to Dec. 21, 1775—six months after the Battle of Bunker Hill—received any commission as Captain, is shown by the fact that he on that day was given an order for a "bounty coat" such coats being supplied only to soldiers and non-commissioned officers. A Boston newspaper, printing this a record of mine, cleverly played up this headline, which, however, was certainly startling to the innocent author: "How President Coolidge's Ancestor started economy treat at the battle of Bunker Hill!" And all because I essayed a bit of wit that Calvin's ancestor made his coat worn at Bunker Hill go a little longer than did Isaac Coolidge of Natick, who had an order for his new coat on November 17, 1775, either for the reason that Isaac's experiences in this battle were more hectic than Lancaster John's, or possibly because the President's ancestor, having the same thrift as is shown today in his descendant, made his coat go a little longer than the Natick man did!

At the dedication of the flag pole at Plymouth, Vermont, last November, according to an item in a Boston newspaper, on the twenty-second of that month, the principal speaker is quoted as saying that the ancestor of Calvin Coolidge, in whose honor this staff was erected, "Captain" John Coolidge was present at the Siege of Boston and at the Battle of Bunker Hill, at which engagement he served on the staff of General Joseph Warren!" I regret to find fault with this very excellent-sounding statement, and I have the greatest admiration for the public man who made it, and no doubt he was so told, and so believed. But it is such statements that discredit all statements and sometimes make a laughing stock of people who really have much history of which to be proud. In the Life of Joseph Warren by Frothingham, and from various other reliable sources, we learn that Dr. Warren did not command at Bunker Hill, but that Gen. Warde and Gen. Putnam were in command, and that Col. Prescott played a most conspicuous part. Warren received his commission as Major-General only three days previous to the Battle of Bunker Hill—on the 14th of June—and he never had a staff!

He slept at Watertown on the night of June 16th—this being the headquarters of the Provincial Congress of which he was chairman—arose with a bad headache on the morning of the 17th, but dressed and set out for Charlestown, knowing that orders had been given the day before for Prescott's, Frye's and Bridge's Regiments and a fatigue party of two hundred Connecticut troops—about 1200 men in all—to go to Bunker Hill and build fortifications, and that these had started at nine o'clock that evening, with Col. Prescott leading. (They were joined at Charlestown Neck by Gen. Putnam and Major Brooks). Warren walked part way, but finally met a friend from whom he borrowed a horse. Does this sound as though he were a commanding General with a staff? When he arrived and was seen by Col. Prescott, the latter, knowing that a commission as Major-General had just been issued, asked him if he wished to take command. Warren is said to have declared that he had come simply as a volunteer, and that he left the command to Prescott and Putnam who had made their plans. We know the sad fact that Warren was slain that day, so that he did not live to take command of an army as a General or to have a staff. Knowing these facts, statements that any man served on his staff make us impatient!

John Coolidge of Lancaster gave splendid service in the Revolution, and to erect a flagpole in his honor is quite proper homage and recognition, but it should be to him as a soldier of this war, and not as Captain or as a member of Warren's staff, for the absurdity of these statements only detracts from the tribute, for the informed person.

There is, moreover, a grave reason why we who know the history of our family, wish that enthusiasts would not try to make John of Boston and Worcester identical with the John of Lancaster! John Coolidge of Boston married Lydia Dawes in 1772, as has been said, and she outlived him, living in fact, until 1815. John Coolidge of Lancaster married Hannah Priest of Marlboro seven years later, in 1779, and she died in Plymouth, Vermont, in 1829. We respectfully ask, therefore, that writers refrain from making these men one and the same, for the sake of the reputations of both the living and the dead. We certainly do not wish to have any rumor of bigamy connected with our President's ancestors!

NOVEL BARBECUE

Captain G. Harry Adalian was the host last Saturday to fifty of his fellow reserve officers in the quartermaster corps at a novel party on his estate on Rogers street, Newton Highlands. The feature of the party was an Armenian "Shishkabab" which is more familiarly known as a barbecue. Native chefs in costume prepared the roast meats on long steel rods over open charcoal fires and Turkish coffee was served from large long-handled brass coffee pots.

The guests gathered early in the afternoon and many enjoyed a swim in Crystal Lake which adjoins the Adalian grounds. Later in the day the group was addressed by Col. William E. Horton, U. S. A., who reviewed their activities at Camp Dix last month during their annual tour of duty.

After the barbecue the officers were shown movies of the YD division in action and a film showing American soldiers fraternizing with Germans after the signing of the armistice.

After the pictures, Miss Ruth Shalpin of Worcester, an Armenian soprano, sang Army songs of her own composition.

MacPHEE—FRANKLIN

On Saturday evening, Miss Grace Louise Franklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Franklin, was married to Mr. Henry A. MacPhee of Waltham, at the home of her parents on Richardson street, Newton, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Robert Rae.

The bride was attended by Miss Grace Sutcliffe of Newton as maid of honor and Mr. Robert Kempton of Waltham was the best man.

The bride's gown was of white lace over satin and the bridesmaid wore changeable taffeta.

Following the ceremony a reception was held from 8.30 to 9.30, the bride and groom being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Franklin and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander S. MacPhee.

The home was very prettily decorated with gladioli and snap-dragon. The wedding march was played by Miss Bartlett, an aunt of the bride.

After a trip through the White Mountains by auto, which was a wedding gift, Mr. and Mrs. MacPhee will make their home at 66 Beaver street, Waltham, after Oct. 1st.

THERE is no secret about the advantages of buying coal early. Prices are lower during the summer months. The yard has ample time to give your order special attention. Delivery can be scheduled to meet your convenience. And once your coal is in the bin, you've nothing more to worry about. It used to be the fad to put off ordering coal until the first cold snap. #### YOUNG THIEF CAUGHT

Sunday morning Inspectors Goode and Conroy arrested Gunnar Nelson, 15 years old, at a hotel in Boston. The lad has been held responsible for several breaks in Newton, Watertown and Waltham. His thefts were mostly from houses whose occupants are away for the summer which he would enter around midnight. If all was quiet he would often sleep until the early morning and then make his getaway with whatever he could lay his hands on, musical instruments, jewelry, radios, electric irons, and clothing. In some cases he would even make a change of apparel and leave his discarded garments behind.

Last week he telephoned Inspector Tracy of Waltham that he heard he was wanted and invited that officer to try and find him. His trial is being held today.
